U.S. troops for Nicaragua?

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's spokesman today refused to rule out the possibility of using U.S. troops in strife-torn Nicaragua.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said the government is consulting with other members of the Organization of American States on the question of a role for U.S. military forces in the Central American state.

Asked whether the troops might be introduced in a peace-keeping role there, Powell told reporters:

"That is a matter on which we are consulting among our friends in the OAS and we will be guided by those consultations and the needs of the situation."

Pressed for more details, the press secretary reread his answer from a prepared statement and refused to go beyond it.

Powell spoke as the OAS was trying to decide whether there is a consensus in support of a surprise U.S. call for an end to the Somoza rule in Nicaragua.

A seven-state working group was named Thursday night to try to work out a resolution acceptable to a two-thirds majority of the 27-member regional organization. The delegates were working from a draft resolution presented by the United States.

OAS foreign ministers met for four hours Thursday and it was apparent sentiment against President Anastasio Somoza was running high.

Another meeting was scheduled today.

U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance opened the deliberations Thursday with a call for the "replacement of the present government with a transitional government of national reconciliation."

The five-state Andean Pact said no solution is possible without the "definitive exclusion of the Somoza regime."

Panama said it was recognizing a five-member government council announced last weekend by the Sandinista guerrilla movement. Earlier, at Panama's request, film footage was shown to the delegates of the murder Wednesday of ABC reporter Bill Stewart at the hands of a Nicaraguan national guard.

Other countries said the OAS should pursue a hands-off policy and allow the Sandinistas to achieve an outright military victory.

It was clear the spreading opposition to Somoza's rule in Nicaragua has led to a marked decline in his hemispheric support.

Equally clear, however, was the determination of some member states to abide by one of the organization's most hallowed principles: non-intervention.

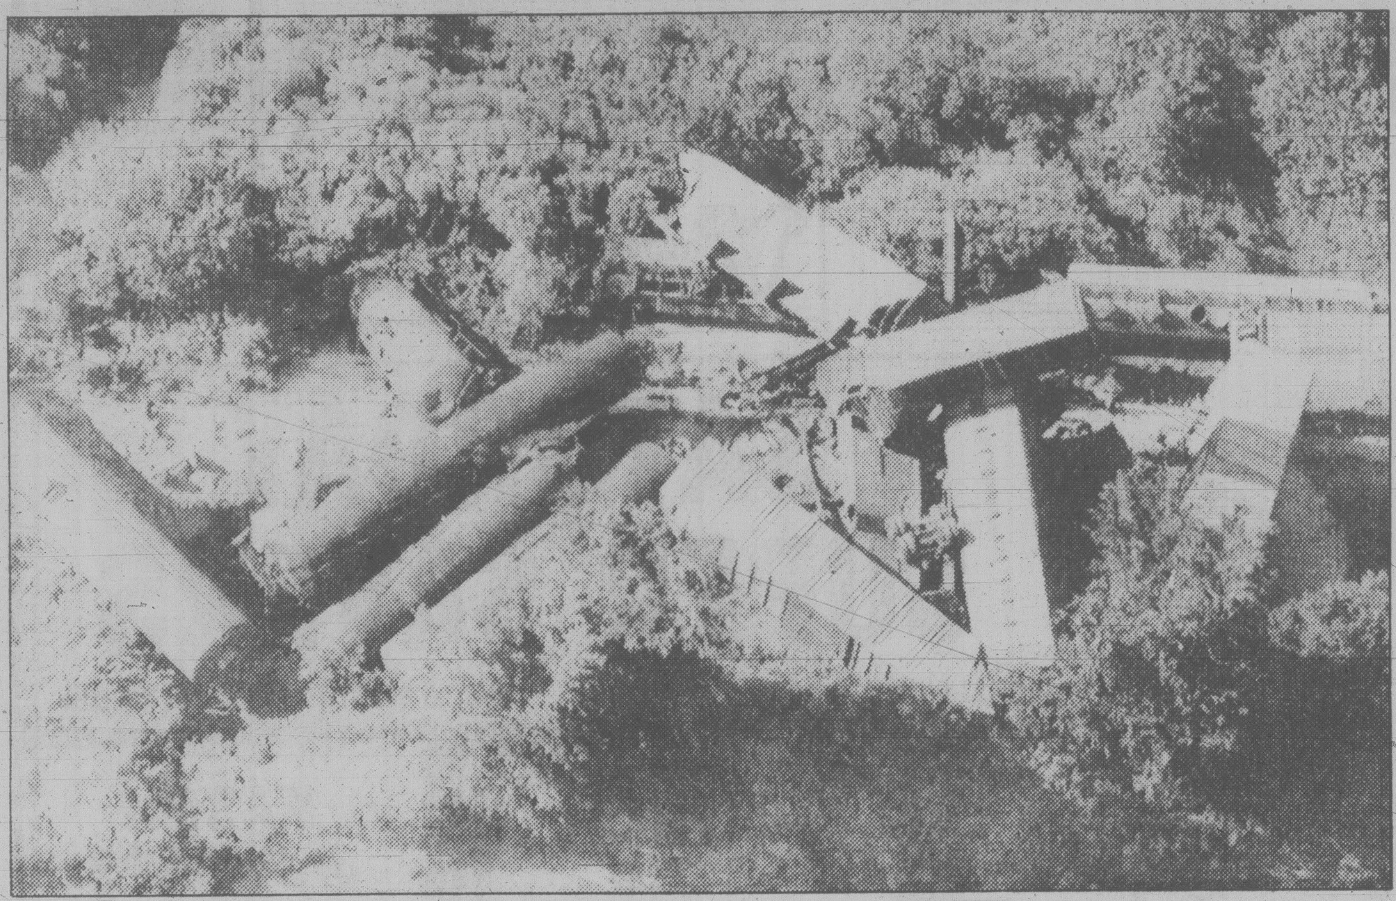
Mexico, for example, has been in the vanguard of anti-Somoza sentiment in the hemisphere. But Mexican Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda, reflecting his country's concerns about U.S. intentions, appealed against OAS intervention in Nicaragua.

Vance also proposed an immediate ceasefire, a cessation of arms shipments to both sides, the sending of an OAS delegation to Managua and the establishment of an OAS peacekeeping presence to help create a climate of peace.

In Managua, Somoza balked at the call for his resignation but said he was open to "a democratic way of solving" the civil war ravaging Nicaragua.

There was more heavy fighting between Somoza's troops and the Sandinista guerrillas in Managua's slum districts, but the guerrillas were reported slipping out of the barrios to fight somewhere else.

"I gave my answer to Vance a long time ago," said Somoza, who has vowed to stay in office until his term expires in 1981. "The same thing was said to me by Bowdler (special U.S. Ambassador William) Bowdler, and I proposed a plebiscite."



TWISTED WRECKAGE is strewn over area near Quebec town of West Brome, where CP Rail freight train collided Thursday with a transport truck, killing the driver. The collision cracked tank cars loaded with propane gas and alcohol which spilled into nearby Yamaka River. A police spokesman said the river, which flows through West Brome, had been contaminated by the gases and the 23,000 residents of Cowansville, about eight kilometers to the west, had been advised not drink from local water supplies because reservoire's may have been contaminated. About 150 residents were evacuated at the time of the crash.

Quiet switch lets ICBC sue drunks

The Insurance Corp. of B.C. is now holding drivers impaired by alcohol or drugs responsible for injury claims.

Such practice has been common with private insurance firms for years.

But ICBC, with cabinet approval, made the change in its coverage without telling anyone.

In a quiet move that began this insurance year, March 1, ICBC changed the regulations enabling it to collect court awards from drivers in cases where they are impaired, under the influence of drugs, found guilty of criminal negligence or driving while under suspension.

As the law now stands, a driver with a blood-alcohol reading in excess of .08 could be held liable for all claims over the minimum $75,000 ICBC would pay.

Awards exceeding $1 million have not been uncommon in recent years.

Drivers could lose their homes, cars and entire assets to pay off claims.

Deputy premier Grace McCarthy, who is now the minister responsible for ICBC, said the cabinet order changing the regulations was approved last November.

The move came at the same time the new auto insurance rates were announced and she said it is

Oil firms get stiff warning

Times News Services

The top consumer affairs official of the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) has warned the oil companies they are "heading for nationalization" if they don't explain the present crisis soon and stop what she called "manipulative" practices.

The same official, Tina Hobson, director of consumer affairs for the DOE, has warned key DOE officials in a memorandum that there is also little or no reason that "consumers (shouldn't) believe DOE is misleading, misinforming or even lying to them about petroleum data."

"We are heading toward nationalization of the oil companies," Mrs. Hobson flatly told corporate consumer affairs representatives and government regulators from several areas.

"I don't want to go in that direction, but if the oil industry and the DOE don't come up with better rationing and something better than those gas lines, there won't be a choice in the matter," she added.

Mrs. Hobson said she had information that jobbers for the major oil companies were engaging in a "manipulative process of blackmailing gas station dealers" into staying open for only a limited number of hours and using only a limited number of pumps, "or else." She said dealers were being threatened with being cut off by those jobbers — their only suppliers — if they didn't heed the warnings.

Mrs. Hobson said she has gone to speak to several groups about the energy crisis lately, but in her most recent speech before consumer leaders, she said she was shouted down and not even allowed to speak. "People are getting impatient with us," she said.

Meanwhile, the White House announced plans today to end the federal rule giving farmers priority in obtaining diesel fuel, apparently so it can be diverted to independent truckers.

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A light plane which smashed into a mountain near Zeballos last August killing four people had been written off as a total loss eight years earlier after a crash in Florida.

Investigators have learned that the aircraft — which lost a wing in mid-flight seconds before the fatal B.C. crash — was rebuilt after the Florida accident and sold in Canada with a certificate of airworthiness that did not show the aircraft had a crash history.

The federal Ministry of Transport (MOT) probe into the Zeballos crash has cast grave doubts about the manner in which planes imported into Canada are deemed safe and airworthy.

While a report on the crash of the Helio Courier aircraft is not expected to be made public until early next month, the Times has learned investigators discovered the plane's certificate of airworthiness issued in the U.S. had been falsified.

The discovery has brought into question the ministry's decades-old practice of accepting American certificates at face value in issuing certificates for Canada.

A spokesman for the air accident investigation branch said in an interview from Ottawa the certificate for the Helio failed to mention a major previous accident, an omission that proved to have deadly consequences.

The single-engine aircraft, operated by Tradewinds Aviation of Vancouver, crashed into the side of a 3,000-metre mountain about 56 kilometres west of Zeballos shortly after taking off from Tahsis on Aug. 15, 1978.

All four persons on board including the pilot, William Merrill, and passengers Albert Gurschler, William Peter and Clifford Peel, were killed.

Subsequent investigations carried out by the MOT revealed that the same plane had crashed into a tree in Florida in 1970, shearing a wing, and had been written-off by insurance adjusters as a total loss.

The wreckage was placed in storage until 1976 when the American owner, whose identity is not known, decided to try to repair the damage.

The Helio factory in the U.S., however, refused to authorize any repairs or provide parts unless the work was done in the factory or at the scene by a qualified, factory-trained mechanic.

Nevertheless the repairs went ahead, with parts apparently taken from a couple of junk Helios that had been in previous crackups.

The plane was repainted and sold to Staron Flight, a small, Vancouver-based charter firm.

A coroner's jury, convened in Tahsis on Jan. 31, found that the port wing fell off in

N-plant spews more radiation

PEACH BOTTOM, Pa. (AP) — An uncontrolled release of radiation was reported today at the Peach Bottom nuclear power plant, but company and federal officials disagreed on its severity.

It was the second time in two days that radioactive gas leaked from one of the plant's stacks.

"There was another release of radiation in the early-morning hours," said Karl Abraham, spokesman for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

"Yesterday's was six per cent over technical specifications (federal limits), and today's was 16 per cent over technical specifications," he said.

But Neil McDermott, spokesman for Philadelphia Electric Co., which operates the York County plant, denied today's radiation release exceeded federal limits although he conceded Thursday's did.

'Unlimited scope' for BCRIC

The B.C. Resources Investment Corp. (BCRIC) is one of the biggest corporations in Canada in the terms of capitalization and has borrowing power of about $2 billion, BCRIC president David Helliwell said Thursday.

"We now have unlimited scope in terms of what we can do with the corporation," Helliwell told a Vancouver news conference in announcing that BCRIC has received gross proceeds of $414.7 million from B.C. residents who applied by the June 15 deadline to purchase 69,126,905 shares in the corporation.

BCRIC shares will appear for trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange on Aug. 7 and Helliwell said he expected the shares would have a book value of about $6.75 initially.

He said the trust funds are now invested in the short-term money market and "are doing alright in the area of 11 per cent" return.

"The response has been absolutely staggering and we've been overwelmed by the number of applications for both the free shares and the share offering.

"This has transformed the corporation into the very, very big leagues and just sends shivers up my spine."

Helliwell said BCRIC directors don't have an investment strategy mapped out yet and any suggestions would be speculative.

Figures released Thursday were not final, Helliwell said, because there is a backlog of applications which have not been processed after a rush by investors before the purchase deadline.

Helliwell said that, as of June 20, 1,821,302 B.C. residents had applied for their five free shares, totalling 9,106,510 shares.

The number of persons applying for 100 or more of the additional shares — to become registered shareholders in the corporation — was more than 110,000.

"I guess you could say that we're cash-rich and relatively poor in holdings at the present time," Helliwell said. "We'll be advising our shareholders this summer on what we intend to do with our cash pool."

The corporation had holdings of $151 million when the provincial government announced its share offering. Combined with the gross proceeds already received, BCRIC now has a value of at least $565 million.

Helliwell said the corporation's share offering has received twice the support of any similar offering ever be-

Strike shuts Heathrow

LONDON (AP) — A strike by some air traffic controllers shut down London's Heathrow Airport, Europe's largest terminal, early today, promising disruptions in international flights to and from Britain.

British Airways said it expected only about one-third of the 45,000 passengers it has booked on flights today would be able to take off.

Airlines were warned that flights on North Atlantic routes might be hit if controllers at Scotland's Prestwick Airport, who control air corridors stretching far into the Atlantic, join the one-day walkout, called to support civil service claim for higher pay.

Since the strike began at midnight, flights scheduled to land at Heathrow were either being diverted to Gatwick, London's second airport, or held up on the Continent, a Heathrow spokesman said.

He said flights to and from Gatwick were operating normally. The spokesman said Heathrow might reopen later in the day with a skeleton staff, but it was expected that about one-quarter of the regularly scheduled flights would leave or arrive.

"We expect a lot of cancellations as well as a lot of delays," the spokesman said.

The air controllers are among 200,000 members of the Institution of Professional Civil Servants who called the one-day walkout to protest against a government offer of a 22-per-cent pay increase.

Printers to hunt new jobs

LONDON (AP) — The 600 members of a printers' union at the centre of a dispute that has closed The Times and Sunday Times for seven months have decided to look for new jobs, saying the newspapers will never again appear on newsstands.

"We have come to the conclusion there is obviously no way in which The Times can resume publication," said Joe Wade, secretary-general of the National Graphical Association.

"The management decided to bury the two titles of The Times and The Sunday Times and cast us in the role of undertakers. We are carrying out that role now."

Manipulative practices must stop, oil firms told

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said President Carter ordered an end to the rule. The action followed the worst day of violence yet in the strike by 100,000 independent U.S. truckers.

The president's action followed his promise Thursday to make more diesel available to the striking truckers, who have complained of fuel shortages.

Bullets tore into more than three dozen rigs in 18 states Thursday. Other trucks were pounded by rocks, run off the road, set afire or plagued by nails strewn on roads. In Idaho, drivers had to make their way around two trees set across a highway.

Rupert Welch, a spokesman for the American Trucking Associations, said today that more than 40 per cent of the hauling capacity of regulated carriers has been stopped by the strike and by fuel problems and normal agricultural marketing was in a turmoil.

Five poultry producers cut operations in Georgia, chickens were drowned and eggs smashed in Tennessee for lack of transportation. North Carolina's cucumber crop was rotting, milk was dumped in Pennsylvania and cotton piled up in Louisiana warehouses.

The National Guard was activated in Kentucky and Florida, where the protest was bottling up deliveries of fuel as well as food. Guards were ordered to truck the fuel themselves in Florida.

In a related development, one of Alberta's largest food distributors has been forced to take evasive measures to skirt fresh produce past violent picket lines of striking independent truckers in California.

Scott National Co. Ltd. has returned — as much as possible — to rail boxcars for hauling fresh onions, potatoes and oranges to major department stores, hospitals and catering companies in Edmonton.

"We've been lucky so far," Ken Kirsch, Edmonton Branch manager of Scott National Co. Ltd., said Thursday.

Bennett's TV backing too late

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett sent the Canadian Radio-television Telecommunications Commission a last-minute telegram Thursday supporting a bid by two Vancouver-based companies to set up a new broadcasting firm but the effort was too late to make any official impact.

Bennett's message, which said the provincial government backs B.C. ownership and the application by Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd. and Premier Cablevision Ltd., came in spite of a clash the Social Credit party had with officials of one of the companies in the May 10 election campaign.

J. R. Peters said at a commission hearing on the application that it had been made clear by an unnamed cabinet minister that the premier felt that "biased" news coverage by B.C. Television, half owned by Western, had affected the election results.

Peters said he dismissed the complaint as "plain garbage."

But Bennett said today he never expressed any feeling one way or the other about the election coverage on BCTV.

Answering questions at a news conference, Bennett said he made no assessment of the election coverage because he seldom had a chance to watch the news during the campaign.

Asked if the telegram was intentionally sent too late to indicate his displeasure with the coverage of his campaign, Bennett said if the telegram was received too late it was only because he was too busy.

The premier said he sent the message from Ottawa while he was in the nation's capital discussing a number of urgent issues with Prime Minister Joe Clark.

He said he sent the telegram as a personal endorsement of the philosophy of B.C.-controlled commercial enterprises.

TV documentary 2,4,5-T shocker

By MARGOT HORNBLOWER

WASHINGTON (WP) — Dramatic new evidence of birth defects, miscarriages and nervous disorders following aerial spraying of herbicides near rural communities was presented to a U.S. House of Representatives subcommittee Thursday.

A documentary by San Francisco television station KRON reported that in Orleans, a northern California town of 600 people, 19 of 30 women had dead or deformed babies over a three-year period. The incidents followed aerial spraying of nearby forests with 2,4,5-T, a chemical defoliant used to destroy the brush around timber.

The residents of Humboldt County claimed that the chemical poisoned water, killed livestock and destroyed crops. A local physician reported an increase in illness related to spraying seasons.

The documentary, which sparked 42,000 letters in California, adds to a growing body of evidence against the spraying of chemical herbicides, members of the House Commerce subcommittee on investigations said. The subcommittee has scheduled hearings on 2,4,5-T next week.

While scientists have known about the deadly properties of 2,4,5-T and related herbicides since the late 1960s when they were used in Vietnam, the chemicals have not been fully banned in the United States.

At the committee meeting Thursday, a National Agricultural Chemicals Association official distributed a statement calling the film "often emotionalized, largely undocumented." It added, "When used properly, pesticides are safe. . . . Pesticides are among the most regulated products in the nation."

The film showed children with twisted limbs, cleft palates and harelips resulting, their parents suspect, from spraying by the U.S. Forest Service. A Forest Service official denied any health hazard from the spraying.

Two Trinity County women — Linda Van Atta, who has had three miscarriages, and Pat Kneer who had a miscarriage and developed cervical cancer — have filed a $1.5 million claim against the Forest Service.

Van Atta said that of the 20 to 25 women of childbearing age in Denny, Calif., "at least 11 had had female problems, including about eight miscarriages, ovarian cysts, menstrual irregularities and one baby just recently born with a harelip."

Her suit is one of many filed against the government in recent years, including hundreds by veterans suffering nervous disorders, impotence, kidney disease and other ailments they attribute to exposure to Agent Orange, a 2,4,5-T compound, in Vietnam.

A federal Environment Protection Agency statement released in San Francisco said the KRON documentary "appears to present new information of which the agency was not aware."

Rep. Andrew McGuire, D-N.J., blamed EPA for doing "a miserable job" over the last eight years of reviewing the 1,500 ingredients in pesticides. However, he added that Congress had voted to allow EPA to put compounds on the market before their safety is proved.

Mail arrives — late

A postcard from Port Said, Egypt, was delivered this week to an address in Waubaushene, Ont., — more than 32 years after it was mailed. The greeting to Rev. Gerard McGinnis was mailed by Jesuit brother P. E. Robin on Jan. 11, 1947, while on his way to a church mission in Darjeeling, India. Brother Robin returned to Toronto 12 years ago. Pamela Athlone, postmistress at Waubaushene, 38 kilometres north of Barrie, said the card must have been misplaced. "Otherwise, it would have been battered up more," she said. "It must have got lost in some cubbyhole or it would look more worn out." The card was addressed to Father McGinnis at a Toronto seminary where he used to live. The seminary was torn down more than 15 years ago and Father McGinnis moved to Waubaushene six years ago. He said he did not know how the letter got to Waubaushene from Toronto but he speculated someone at the post office in Toronto may have obtained his latest address from one of 16 seminaries in the city.

Bo Weaver's bladder brought an end to the disc jockey's takeover of WTTMPAM in Trenton, N.J., to protest high prices and long lines at gasoline stations. After barricading himself inside the control room and playing Cheaper Crude or No More Food almost non-stop for 11 hours, Weaver pried the last nails out of the studio doors and emerged, saying: "I'm trying to get out so I can go to the bathroom." "This was a spontaneous thing," Weaver said. "I was on the way to work and in the whole stretch there was not a gas station open. Finally I found one and sat in line for 2½ hours." At about 9 p.m., station owner Herb Scott told Weaver on the air that he would be fired. A flood of public response followed. More than 1,000 phone calls were logged at the station, including some calling for establishment of a "Bo Weaver Unemployment Fund." More than 200 people rallied outside the radio station, chanting "We want Bo" and "Go, Go, Bo," and forcing police to close the roads near the station. Inside, about 100 supporters jammed the studio area, slipping pizza and money under the door. Scott rescinded the disc jockey's dismissal after learning of the support, including advertiser's threats to cancel their accounts if Weaver were fired.

Among many other things, today is the second annual National Fink Day, when Finks from across the United States will reunite in the northeast Texas town of Fink. "We're really going to put Fink on the map this year," said Robert Fink, president of the Texas Finks. The highlight will be the Fink of the Year award. "This Fink of the Year competition is open to anyone who has performed some act during the past year to help his fellow man," Fink said.

Henry Woo, an Alberta MLA and the only person of Chinese origin among elected legislators in Canada, compares himself to an egg yolk. "Sitting in the legislature, I really know what an egg yolk feels like surrounded by white," Woo said at a gathering in his honor Wednesday. Woo, 50, worked for the Alberta government as an executive assistant until last March when he was elected Conservative MLA for the Sherwood Park constituency.

Jack Horner, former industry minister defeated last month in the federal election, says he is going to write an autobiography. Horner says he will "tell people what it's really like in Ottawa." The former Conservative MP, who switched to the Liberals in 1977, said Edmonton publisher Mel Hurtig has expressed interest in his book. But he plans to consult a ghost writer before he begins the task.

Billy Graham says he isn't surprised at Leonid Brezhnev's reported comment last week at the SALT treaty signing that "God will not forgive us if we fail." Graham calls such seeming anomalies on the part of devout atheists "slips of the inner heart." Says he, in kicking off his latest crusade in Nashville, Tenn., "When Nikita Khrushchev was here several years ago he quoted a lot of scripture — but he called it 'old Russian sayings.'"

Thorpe acquitted

LONDON (CP) — Jeremy Thorpe and three co-defendants were acquitted today in the "trial of the century" on charges that they conspired to murder a male model who claimed to be Thorpe's lover.

Found not guilty on all counts, Thorpe, former Liberal party leader, jumped up, picked up the two seat cushions he had used during the trial and flipped them to his relieved-looking wife, Marion. Then he threw his hands into the air for a moment, leaned down and gave her an enormous hug.

"I feel fine!" the 50-year-old defendant shouted in answer to a chorus of reporters' questions.

"I'm so happy," said his wife, adding later: "I'm not surprised, but very relieved."

The jury of nine men and three women delivered its verdict after a retirement of 52 hours and a total of 16 hours of actual deliberations locked in a jury room.

At 2:32 p.m. the jury returned to the oak-panelled Old Bailey courtroom to give its decision on the fate of Thorpe, 50, once voted Britain's most-popular politician.

Thorpe and the three other defendants all pleaded not guilty to charges they conspired to murder male model Norman Scott, 39, who alleged he had a homosexual relationship with the Liberal politician in the early 1960s.

Thorpe alone was also charged with incitement to murder, but the jury acquitted him on this charge as well.

The trial began May 8 and the jury was sent out Wednesday morning with this advice from Judge Sir Joseph Cantley: "Take your time. We will wait for you."

Thorpe had been accused of inciting David Holmes, one of his co-defendants, to kill Scott. The other co-defendants were John Le Mesurier and George Deakin. Each charge carried a maximum 10-year prison term.

Defence lawyers concentrated their case on attacking the credibility of prosecution witnesses, and the judge echoed their words in a two-day summing-up during which he called Scott a parasite and a crook.

He also said the evidence against Thorpe was circumstantial.

Quake shakes Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An earthquake shook the Mexican capital and areas to the south early today but there were no immediate reports of casualties or damage.

An official at the University of California Seismographic Stations at Berkeley, Calif., said the quake measured 6.2 on the Richter scale. He said preliminary reports put the centre of the quake somewhere off Mexico's southwestern coast between the states of Oaxaca and Chiapas.

The 30-second tremor sent tourists rushing from their hotels as buildings swayed in Mexico city, but they quickly returned to their beds, witnesses said.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

Ireland returns Serb hijacker

McGUIRE AIR FORCE BASE, N.J. (AP) — An anti-Communist Serb who hijacked an American Airlines jet with 135 persons aboard was returned to the United States today on the same Boeing 707 that he forced to fly him to Ireland.

Nikola Kavaja was led off the plane in handcuffs shortly after his arrival here on a flight from Shannon, Ireland, where he was ordered deported by Irish authorities.

Kavaja was not allowed to talk to reporters as federal marshals took him to be arraigned before a federal magistrate.

A spokesman at Shannon Airport said five Irish policemen guarded Kavaja and his U.S. lawyer, David Boeshich, on the flight to the United States. The spokesman said the jet was flown by the same volunteer crew that took it to Ireland on Thursday.

Who rules Uganda?

KAMPALA (Reuter) — Two men were contending for the presidency of Uganda today after a day of riots and shooting in this capital city.

Godfrey Binaisa, a lawyer who was sworn in as the country's third president in less than three months, was given a strong boost Thursday when he was supported by Tanzania, which has 40,000 soldiers in Uganda.

Hospital sources said two persons were killed and about 50 wounded Thursday when soldiers fired on tens of thousands of people who took to the streets.

The protestors were demonstrating in favor of Binaisa's predecessor, Yusufu Lule, who retracted an earlier resignation statement and said he was still president.

A senior government official in Tanzania said his country firmly backs Binaisa.

"It looks as if the game is over," said a supporter of Lule after hearing the Tanzanian statement. Tanzanian soldiers entered Uganda to play a strong role in the overthrow of dictator Idi Amin, deposed 10 weeks ago after eight years in power.

Political sources said Lule, elected by exiles to be interim president as soon as the Amin dictatorship collapsed, was still in State House in Entebbe.

It was not clear whether he was being detained there by Tanzanian-Ugandan guards at the gate.

Lule, a 69-year-old academic, issued a statement insisting he remains president even though he has given up the position of chairman of the executive committee of the governing Uganda National Liberation Front (UNLF).

Binaisa's administration rejected the statement, saying:

"The government is in full control and has the backing of the people."

The broadly-based government formed by exiles appeared split between conservatives, gathered around Lule, and more radical politicians, who back Binaisa.

The conservatives are believed to be trying to keep out former president Milton Obote, who was overthrown by Amin.

The radicals appear to be close to Obote, who has been living in Tanzania.

Differences in attitudes

It's ironic that the police boards of Greater Victoria's two largest municipalities both chose this month to take a long look at the future structures and roles of their departments.

The municipalities (Victoria and Saanich) may geographically adjoin each other, but in philosophy and attitudes towards policing, the two seem a hundred miles apart.

The Saanich police board this week announced a complete reorganization of its department to place a much greater emphasis on the modern concepts of community and preventive policing.

The Victoria police board, when it met a couple of weeks ago, didn't make any formal decision but implied that it believed community policing was a dead issue because it would cost too much, would be too difficult to organize, and would not be much liked by the policemen.

The Saanich police union reacted enthusiastically in its enthusiastic reaction to the new direction being taken by the board. Union president Phil Jamieson said the plan "is industrial democracy in action, and the public and the force will be the real winners. It's a very positive modern thrust."

The Victoria police union spent a couple of hours explaining to its board that community or preventive policing isn't considered "real" by its policemen, that its policemen don't want to work in neighborhoods because that's not "where the action is," and that its policemen would rather have dogs than psychiatric nurses to help them deal with deranged people.

The chief complaint at the Victoria meeting, however, was that a move to a community-based police force would be inordinately expensive because it would require at least 75 to 100 new policemen. It's worth noting, then, that Saanich has succeeded in making the shift with an addition of just one single officer, and perhaps a few civilian employees later on. The rest of the new youth and community services division will be made up of officers transferred from existing divisions. The increase in cost for the first year will be only about $25,000.

The whole idea is that the priorities of the force, and hence the deployment of its men and resources, should be shifted towards preventive and community work, not that this community work should be tacked on as an addendum to the work police do now.

This is an idea that has won wide support from the B.C. Police Commission and from many police departments across North America that have tried it. It is regrettable that it is neither understood nor accepted by the Victoria police department.

It demands a public inquiry

While his desire to avoid raking up in public the errors and embarrassments of the past may be admirable in a small town, the chairman of the special inquiry into health care at Alert Bay runs the risk of discrediting his work by keeping things behind closed doors.

Some may think that the recent inquest into the death of Renee Smith provided a sufficient forum for airing complaints, but even Vancouver coroner Glen McDonald's wide-ranging investigation couldn't have dealt adequately with the number and intensity of complaints by some residents about health care in the area. One of the recommendations of the coroner's jury was a full-fledged public inquiry.

Instead, the residents of Alert Bay got a semi-confidential investigation by Dr. Charles Ballam, chairman of the joint hospitals committee, and a number of hospital and health care specialists. He has made no provision for public hearings where witnesses can be heard in public and cross-examined, their evidence weighed and tested against other known facts.

In his first day in Alert Bay, Dr. Ballam heard only a few witnesses, in private. The Indians who agitated for an investigation in the first place have understandably boycotted these proceedings. Dr. Ballam says his mandate, as chairman of a strictly advisory board with no powers of its own, does not allow him to accede to local Indian demands for a more formal commission of inquiry. That seems to be an unnecessarily narrow interpretation of his role.

As a result, Health Minister Bob McClelland has suggested there could be a third inquiry after Dr. Ballam's group has wrapped up its work. This would be investigative overkill. Any subsequent public inquiry as the term is usually understood would be unlikely to uncover anything Dr. Ballam's seven-member team is incapable of learning on its own.

It is not too late to transform this somewhat informal probe into a proper investigative forum. The health minister ought to exercise the power and influence of his office to ensure this is done.

RICHARD GWYN

Do Liberals have a future?

OTTAWA — If John Turner becomes the next Liberal leader, your reading of this column will have been a complete waste of time. However, should Turner decide instead that his heart, and his pocketbook, belong to the law firm of McMillan Binch, then a scan over the succeeding paragraphs may turn out to have been worthwhile.

At issue is whether the Liberals, now out of power in Ottawa and in each province, and even in the Yukon, may go the way of the British Liberals — into oblivion.

Theoretical reasons why this may happen are easy to construct. Individualism, which is the core philosophy of Liberals and which presupposes that individuals are more important than the collectivity and that individuals can be relied on to act rationally for the common good when given a chance to do their own thing, probably is an idea whose time is past. Economic restraint, the limited prospects for growth, conservation rationing — all are antithetical to individualism.

Natural divisions

Further, the natural division among political parties is between those of the right (Conservatives) and those of the left (New Democrats). The Liberals occupy an unnatural, and therefore inherently unstable, middle.

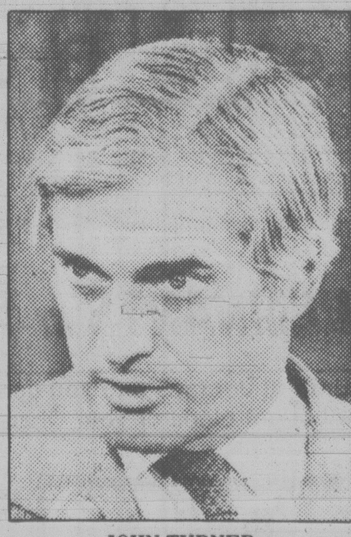
So much for theory. The Liberals have ruled almost uninterruptedly for half a century. They were defeated on May 22 but were by no means decimated. Pierre Trudeau won the most votes — 40 per cent to 36 per cent — and an uncommonly large number of seats — 114 — for an opposition.

Then there's Turner. Trudeau's tenure as Liberal leader is assured until the Quebec referendum, which will be held in the spring. However, the party constitution requires a "review" of the leadership within one year of an election. Party insiders expect Trudeau to resign soon after a spring referendum but before the "review" can be held, to avoid a possible party split. The Liberals probably thus will elect a new leader late in 1980.

Turner may run. If he does, he probably will win, provided ex-finance minister Donald Macdonald stays out of the race as he has said repeatedly he will do, although some of his post-election private remarks about his intentions have been more ambiguous.

Turner has "it" — no matter whether you mean by "it" the charisma of true leadership or just the superficial charm that thrives in the eye of the TV camera. Since personalities rather than ideologies define our politics, Turner could bring the Liberals back to life just by becoming their leader.

Even a Turner, or a Macdonald, though, may not be enough. Leadership is only one prop of the three-legged stool upon which the Liberals have sat in power for so long, and so comfortably. Patronage is another leg. It has vanished. Quebec is the third leg. It remains but is wobbly now because Quebecers for the first time are realizing that to vote Liberal may be to vote themselves out of national power.



JOHN TURNER
. . . what if he comes back?

Now look east to Newfoundland. It itself, (this week's defeat of the Liberals now led by ex-external affairs minister Don Jamieson), concerns only the half-million Newfoundlanders. In context, the event adds two more chapters to the chronicle of Liberal national decline.

In Newfoundland, the Liberals now could collapse as they have done already in the west. Their support — an inheritance from Joey Smallwood — is limited to the outports, while in the towns and cities the real contenders are the Conservatives and NDP.

Further, by going home, Jamieson has left a large hole in the already thin ranks of non-Quebec federal Liberals. Other gaps may appear. Former fisheries minister Romeo LeBlanc may leave to become president of the University of Moncton. Former agriculture minister Eugene Whelan is considering an attractive industrial offer. Few reinforcements — Lloyd Axworthy, Art Phillips, Roy Maclaren — are available to replace them.

For the Liberals to continue going down, the NDP, of course, must come up. On May 22, the party went sideways. Despite money, a professional advertising campaign, a sympathetic press and union support, the NDP won no more seats and, proportionately, only a few more votes, than did its predecessor the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation (CCF) away back in 1945.

New starlets

Yet the NDP did elect as many potential new starlets — Pauline Jewitt, Ian Waddell, Bill Blaikie — as did the Liberals. These newcomers, together with byelection victors Bob Rae and Fonse Faour, both under 30, should enable the NDP to bring off the crucial baton change between generations.

Outside Quebec, the NDP nudged up to the Liberals, in votes (22 per cent to 31 per cent) and in seats (26 to 49). During the campaign, NDP Leader Ed Broadbent made more new friends, and certainly fewer enemies, than either of his rivals. Lastly, the unions, although they won few votes for the NDP, are as determined as ever to keep on trying.

In theory, the NDP could, and should, displace the Liberals to become the alternative governing party. In practice, there's Turner. But for him, it'd be worth taking a bet that for once in Canadian politics, theory and real life would turn out to be the same.

Carter tries the solar route

WASHINGTON — Traffic was light on the streets of gas-starved Washington Tuesday as President Carter announced a national solar energy strategy that would have the sun provide 20 per cent of U.S. energy needs by the year 2000.

Behind him on the roof of the White House west wing, four large steel-and-glass panels angled to the south soaked up the sunlight — prototypes for what officials hope will be a solar energized America within two decades.

The panels, costing $28,000, are primarily for hot water in the White House staff mess hall.

Great adventure

The president, his popularity at a low ebb because of his administration's poor handling of the nation's energy problems (not to mention inflation), told gathered newsmen and members of Congress that "no one can embargo the sun" or interfere with the delivery of its energy.

Referring to the panels behind him, he said: "A generation from now, this could be just a curiosity, a museum piece, an example of a road not taken, or it could be a small part of one of the greatest adventures ever undertaken by the American people."

He likened the use of the solar panels to President William Harrison's introduction in 1891 of electric lighting in the White House, at a time when electricity was not yet available to the public.

At the centre of the solar strategy which Carter sent to congress is a National Solar Bank which in 1981 would begin to subsidize loans to homes and businesses installing solar equipment. The initial budget would be $100 million a year.

The bank would be financed by proceeds of Carter's windfall oil profits tax which is now being steered through Congress. This is a tax on profits which the major oil companies are expected to reap as federal controls are lifted from domestic oil prices.

The president also announced a series of major tax credits for homebuilders and industries which harness the sun's energy.

The 1980 budget for solar power amounts to about $1 billion.

Solar power, in Carter's plan, refers not only to the sun but to all renewable energy sources, including the wind, water and even gasohol, made with alcohol derived from crops.

Time and time again Tuesday, the president and his senior aides used the words "ambitious" and "bold" in describing the strategy.

If anything, they were understating the case. Renewable resources now account for about six per cent of U.S. energy consumption, and solar power alone represents a minuscule part of this figure.

For purposes of comparison, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger reminded reporters that by the year 2000, nuclear energy will be kicking in no more than one-tenth of American energy needs.

Political issue

The White House event had a definite political stamp to it. In recent weeks, the Carter administration has been hit with a hailstorm of criticism for its energy policies, mainly from frustrated motorists and truckers.

"There are political considerations in this," one White House source acknowledged. "Solar in general is perceived to be a very positive energy issue by the public."

"It is waiting for real leadership, and that is something the president can offer. The train is already leaving the station and he's going to be on it."

Schlesinger told newsmen that, all subsidies and tax credits aside, the government could only point the way and give a small push where solar energy is concerned. "It's not like putting a man on the moon, which the government did," he said.

Both the public and the private sector would have to make a serious commitment

Adopted reunions

In response to Max Low's column on June 16, regarding an adoptee's results on finding her natural parents:

You have singled out one, rather unhappy reunion and made quite a story of it. I must react strongly to this as the majority of reunions made do not have this sad tone to them. I myself was reunited with my natural sister and mother and it was very satisfying for all of us.

Whether the result is good or bad it is a very necessary part of life, to understand your roots. If a person is ready to start and finish a search like this, then surely they have considered what the outcome might be!

I could go on but I think you understand my objection to the article. — Mrs. B. Trowsdale, 4726 Elk Lake Drive.

French not needed

You printed a letter (Hard to believe) in your June 19 issue from an (American?) reader now in B.C. who found it hard to believe that Canadians do not understand why many citizens in Quebec (are they not Canadians as well?) are upset because not everyone wants to take French in school. The writer felt that it is a practical necessity to speak a second language and, I guess because he took French, it should be French.

Now, I speak and write five languages because I happened to grow up in two countries where I really needed to speak and write either one or more of these languages, mainly because of some work situations. But in the 25 years in Canada I found that I could do exacellently well with my English alone, and my children who, growing up here in Canada had some instruction in a few foreign languages but definitely never used these, are completely happy with their English.

Once I worked in Ottawa where our French secretary received a higher salary than her colleagues on the basis that she was 'bilingual,' but when she had to type a difficult English report she either became ill or had to ask her colleagues to do the job.

I used to travel often in Quebec and when I took seriously ill in Quebec City's largest hotel, the manager could find only one doctor who could speak enough English to come to my assistance. Another time in Trois Rivieres due to an accident I landed in the hospital, where only one nurse could start an English conversation. Everybody else, except an English doctor there, did not want to or could not speak English.

French is a very difficult language for anyone to comprehend. Knowing a few words, or to speak a language fluently in any conversation, are two different things. I took 12 years of French, starting as a child, lived in France for over a year plus several visits, but I must admit that I still find it difficult to "parler en francais" — and when it comes to the purse of our taxpayers, isn't it more practical to drop the issue and that language if you like. After all, we all believe that we live in a free society. — Henriette A. Draayer, 404-2622 Prior Street.

Boating first aid

An accident happens on a boat, many miles from shore or medical help. Something must be done in a hurry. But what?

We have just issued a folder, First Aid for Boaters, that can answer some of these questions right on the spot, and maybe save a life — or at least alleviate some suffering until the victim can get professional treatment.

Readers may obtain copies from the St. John Ambulance branch in their area — G. Douglas Scott, Information Officer for B.C., St. John Ambulance.

Get facts straight

As a government employee I would like to briefly reply to Ken Burns letter to the editor in the Times of June 18 (A reply to Fryer).

I would suggest he get his facts straight, in broad terms, as to what benefits we receive as part of "quite a Dagwood sandwich."

As a citizen I have the right to espouse the cause of a political, just as he or any other citizen. Again, if he had his facts straight, he would know that the BCGEU is non-partisan. Individual members, however, have a free choice in voting.

Public sector employees have been, and continue to be used as scapegoats for mismanagement in both levels of government across this country. I think probably even you are aware of this, Mr. Burns! — Marina Hendry, 66-2500 Florence Lake Road.

Right to die

It has been said that during the present session of the legislature a Bill of Rights will be introduced to our province.

Perhaps to the traditional rights of freedom of speech and assembly, choice of education and so on, the right to die should be given consideration.

It would offer an individual the opportunity to dispose not only of his or her personal possessions, but also of his or her own life while he or she is in full enjoyment of mental, physical and emotional health.

Neither relatives nor friends, or the medical profession should have any part in what is a strictly personal decision. Nobody does question the right of choice when we make our last will and testament, nor praise or blame the lawyers or the executors for carrying on the wishes of their clients.

These wishes are confidential and sacred. The same should apply to the doctors who hasten the departure of patients who do not want to prolong a hopeless agony. It is very true that a physician is bound to save lives by the Hippocratic oath which is still the guide of the medical profession.

But Hippocrates, the father of medicine, lived during the Golden Age of Greece, 460-377 B.C., when machines to keep the heart beating and respirators to keep the lungs artificially functioning did not exist.

A physician is bound by ethics to save lives. But what life does really exist in a patient who cannot move, think, hear, see and whose "life" depends entirely upon machines?

Euthanasia is not mercy killing. We do not kill what is already dead. Euthanasia is extreme compassion, it is opening the door to eternity to a soul imprisoned in a body which no longer can function even to a minimal degree.

Euthanasia should never become universal, but should be a matter of personal choice and those who freely choose it should carry with them an identifying card or bracelet to signify their will. If, at any moment of their lives, they should change their minds, they only have to get rid of these identification items.

But the right to die should be entrenched in a general Bill of Rights even if only a few individuals may take advantage of it. — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

China: Greed society coming?

Rush for consumer goods

By CHRIS MULLIN
Manchester Guardian

Eight years ago a friend made the mistake of complimenting a Chinese girl, through an interpreter, on her looks. The interpreter nearly had a fit. The girl, he said (without consulting her) was insulted; in China girls attached no importance to their looks.

That may have been so in 1971, but lately the line seems to have changed. Today Chinese girls are perming their hair, lipstick is coming back, and gaily colored scarves are all the rage.

One or two girls are even getting quite flirty. Near Tien an Men Square in Peking one evening I caught sight of a beautiful girl in a bright red sweater, with a red paper flower in her hair. She stood out from a crowd of cyclists held up at traffic lights. Just as I was reaching for my telephoto lens the lights turned green and she sped off across the square. Halfway across she turned and waved. Eight years ago no girl in China would dare to initiate a wave at a foreign man.

So far it's all quite innocent. No tight trousers or sweaters — Chinese girls do not make a feature of their breasts or bottoms; no sexist advertisements (indeed no advertisements at all so far, although they are rumored to be on the way); scarcely even any dresses or skirts.

There are no girlie magazines, although a roaring trade is developing in photographs of actresses from Hong Kong and Japan. Most of them are fully dressed, but some are in poses that suggest they have something other than the thoughts of Chairman Mao on their minds.

A bizarre development over the last few months has been the appearance in photographers' shops all over China of pictures of brides in white wedding gowns. There were only a relative handful of Christians in China to whom a white wedding could ever mean anything.

Chinese "hippies" are also beginning to surface. We came across some one morning in the East Lake Park in the southern city of Wuhan. A crowd of youths dressed in garish home-made Western-style jackets and ties were dancing and playing guitars. One or two of them appeared to be smashed out of their minds.

There are other signs of the times. Eight years ago a bicycle and a watch were the principal consumer status symbols. Today it's a television set. Black and white sets now sell for 180 yuan ($130) — four or five months' average wages (though bear in mind there are likely to be two or three breadwinners in each family).

In Canton we found a family living five to a room in a tenement block by the Pearl River with a brand-new television. On a commune in rural Szechwan, deep in the interior of China, we were told that each production team (comprising maybe 25 families) had a television.

Recently the Peking shops have started to display color sets going at what by Chinese standards is a mind-blowing 2,000 yuan ($1,600) a time. Yet already the Chinese room-mate of a friend at Peking University says her family has a color television.

What next? Motor cars perhaps? Until now no cars for private sale have been manufactured in China, but imagine every one of the millions of bicycles which clog the roads of Peking and Shanghai translated into a motor vehicle. Rome, Bangkok, Los Angeles would be as nothing compared to rush hour in Peking.

Yet in the past year or so one or two private individuals seem to have acquired cars. The going rate is said to be 9,000 yuan ($6,500) or 18 years' average income. The only people who could afford such sums (no rental cars in China — yet) are those who have come back from overseas, or former capitalists recently in receipt of large sums of back-dated compensation for the expropriation of their assets. Our guide in Canton said she knew of two such people who had recently acquired private cars.

But we mustn't get carried away. China is one of the poorest countries in the world. Cars and television sets are still well beyond the aspirations of the overwhelming majority of her citizens. What you find in shops of the West One area of Peking or Shanghai is far beyond the horizon of most peasants who form 90 per cent of the population.

Nevertheless, the Chinese consumer is now a force to be reckoned with. Acquisitive instincts which in the past have been suppressed in the desperate drive for capital accumulation are beginning to surface. The leaders have decided to lift the lid a little. The question is, by how much?

Launch a craze in China — be it sunglasses or the Hula Hoop — and you have to multiply by a potential market of 800 million. Where will it all end? There is no way the Chinese economy can possibly meet the consumer aspirations of all its people. So what to do? Import from abroad and squander precious foreign exchange in the process?

Already there are signs of a somewhat irrational obsession with things foreign. Japanese watches and televisions are on sale in Peking despite the fact that China makes perfectly good watches and television sets of her own.

Televisions, and other luxuries, are pouring across the border from Hong Kong — whether as gifts for relatives or for resale remains unclear. One tailoring factory even started to produce jeans until the word went out that jeans were not allowed.

Western films are drawing crowds to the cinemas. When the American cops and robbers film Convoy hit Peking, demand was so great that first performances began at six o'clock in the morning.

Word is even spreading of films that haven't reached China. "Have you seen The Deer Hunter?" a girl from the China Travel Service asked me as we strolled up the Great Wall.

There is something slightly sad about all this. China until now has been one of the few societies in the world where greed and personal ambition are largely unexploited. What's more, to the casual observer at least, there appears to exist a refreshing level of contentment, dignity and fulfilment on a scale not found in any of the so-called developed countries. Is this all to be dissolved in a mad scramble for television sets and tape recorders?

The irony is that China has a rich culture of her own which was flourishing when Europeans lived in caves. How much better that the new and welcome freedoms in China should be channelled into developing her own culture (vigorously suppressed until recently), instead of importing some of the worst aspects of ours.

As things go at the moment, there is a clear danger that by the time the British lease on Hong Kong expires in 1993 it will not be China that takes over Hong Kong, but Hong Kong that takes over China.

Divorce possible, but not easy

NEW YORK TIMES

SHANGHAI — It could almost have been a tale out of an old Chinese novel. The irate woman, angered by her husband's filial devotion to his parents rather than to her, and by her mother-in-law's scorn when she failed to give birth to a son, sued for divorce.

Under a liberal divorce law decreed by the Communists to lessen what they view as the oppression of traditional family life, she was entitled to the divorce, because her husband's family, which she had been forced to live with, was guilty of what the Communists term feudal thinking.

But in practice, as Wei Jinfeng, 35 years old, found out in a protracted court mediation session here that was opened to visiting U.S. legislators, asking for a divorce can be asking for trouble. It goes against the feeling for social harmony and economic efficiency and it exposes a married couple to the full force of community pressure.

After a 2½-hour debate involving Mrs. Wei, her husband, a judge, two assessors, or jurors, and half a dozen representatives from the couple's work place and neighborhood, Mrs. Wei agreed to a reconciliation. Only she had argued for the divorce.

"At present our country is carrying out the four modernizations," the judge told her, referring to the government's economic development program in agriculture, science and technology, defence and industry. "Our country needs stability and unity, so families must practise stability and unity also."

"Our duty is to educate people, not to attack them," he counseled both Mrs. Wei and her husband, Hung Sungdao, a 39-year-old clerk in an import-export office. Their names differ because in China a women does not adopt the husband's name.

The judge and the others who urged the couple to get back together did not use the term love, which is officially regarded as a suspiciously decadent Western conceit.

Instead, a co-worker of Mrs. Wei's at the Shanghai Meteorological Instrument Factory advised, what they needed was to base their marriage "on a good political understanding," such as she had with her husband. The remarks elicited a titter from spectators.

Mrs. Wei, who held her 5-year-old daughter on her lap during much of the session, applied for a divorce in August. If both partners agree, "there is freedom of divorce," the judge, Li Haiqing, explained. Divorce can also be granted, he said, in case of adultery or if the couple did not have a chance to get to know each other well before marrying or when one partner is discriminated against because of the lingering "poison of feudal thinking," as in Mrs. Wei's instance.

As Mrs. Wei described her situation, their "contradiction," the Maoist term for troubles, began when she gave birth to a daughter instead of a son. Male offspring have traditionally been more treasured because they can earn more and stay with their parents after marriage.

When Mrs. Wei came home from the maternity hospital, she told the court, her mother-in-law greeted her by holding up a male infant, a sign designed to insure that she would have a boy next time. Later the two women quarrelled over how much Mrs. Wei ate, and the contradiction sharpened when she secretly had an abortion, fearing the consequences of another daughter.

Mrs. Wei then moved out, taking a small room for herself and her child.

Her husband recalled the story differently, testifying that she showed no respect for his parents, smashed much of the furniture in anger, ripped his clothes one day when they met on the street and went to his office over 140 times to complain about his behavior. Still, he did not want a divorce.

After husband and wife finished testifying, some of the people they work with and live with took turns urging them to make up.

What finally seemed to sway Mrs. Wei was concern for her daughter, who, she said, blamed her for the troubles.

It is difficult to gauge how widespread is the old-fashioned thinking encountered by Mrs. Wei. A woman interpreting the case commented: "I didn't have the same problem. My child is a boy, and my mother-in-law can't bear to be separated from him."

Foreign contacts taboo

By JOHN FRASER

PEKING — Municipal authorities here have issued a stern new civic edict which prohibits all but officially approved contacts and friendships with foreigners.

The edict is an expanded version of public security bureau guidelines on relations between foreigners and Chinese issued earlier and which have already been read out in various institutes in the city. The edict goes into considerable detail about the kinds of things which are specifically taboo unless the state is formally informed through a person's unit. All Chinese belong to a work, commune or academic unit and it is the basic system by which the state controls many aspects of peoples' lives.

The edict provides insight into the kinds of things that have irked certain authorities in Peking during the past half year. It is now forbidden, for example, to have meals with foreigners in restaurants, join them at the theatre, attend dance parties or visit them in their homes. It is forbidden to give out one's address to a foreigner.

Since some addresses have already been given out, if a foreigner makes a visit it must be reported to the relevant unit. Chinese are forbidden to ask foreigners to buy them superior-quality Chinese goods at the foreigners-only friendship store. Citizens in trouble with the authorities are forbidden to appeal to western journalists for assistance. Sexual relations with foreigners are forbidden.

The draconian edict is not based on any laws which exist in China and is backed up only by the power of authorities. As such, it highlights in a spectacular way the distance China still has to go before it can lay claim to anything resembling a recognizable rule of law.

To understand how all this works, you have to try and grasp what passes for logic among certain communist officials and theoreticians who seem to dominate Peking's version of city hall and its propaganda outlet, the Peking Daily.

Having a friendship with a foreigner is not illegal, since the state can formally approve such a relationship upon request. A few such friendships still exist and there is nothing overtly sinister about them except that the state has decided any potential threat is minimal.

Consequently, when an official states there is nothing illegal about normal contacts between Chinese and foreigners, he is technically correct. That is because banning all unofficial contacts has nothing to do with the law whatsoever. It is simply a statement backed up by impressive authority.

Apparently, it was not even considered necessary to issue a list of possible consequences should Chinese transgress the strictures of the edict. Threats alone are thought to be sufficient.

Such actions have historical precedents in Chinese history and can be traced directly back from the communists through the old government of Chiang Kai-shek, the era of the warlords, and ultimately to the imperial system itself.

Emperors, however, relied upon divine authority to justify edicts, while the communist authorities invoke "the dictatorship of the proletariat." In whatever case, it allowed both emperor and communist alike the justification to say one thing and then do another.

B.C. Hydro debt '$9 per second'

Taxpayers are paying $783,000 a day to service B.C. Hydro's $4.9 billion debt, Bill King (NDP—Shuswap-Revelstoke) told the legislature Thursday.

This breaks down in round numbers to $32,000 an hour or $453 a minute or $9 a second, he said.

King cited the figures in an attack on the government's introduction of a one-line bill to increase the corporation's borrowing power by $750 million to $5.65 billion.

King said it is appalling the government is seeking the increase in view of these debt charges, and of the scathing indictment of Hydro's management by a committee dominated by Social Credit MLAs.

"I certainly don't intend to support the ever-increasing borrowing authority of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority," King said.

He said there still is no regulatory authority effectively controlling either the power forecasts of B.C. Hydro, its rates policy or any power generation options.

Hydro has some strange kind of relationship with the cabinet that permits its concerns to pass through that government level by "a system of osmosis rather than public discussion," he said.

"B.C. Hydro is the only public utility in all of Canada that has the authority to set their rates for electrical consumption without the need to justify an increase before some public regulatory agency."

KING
. . . $783,000 a day

"It is most inappropriate that we be asked in this legislature each year to grant to that authority an ever-increasing debt burden on the citizens and taxpayers of this province without any method whatsoever of calling that giant monolith to account."

He said it is greatly irresponsible of the government to advocate that good money be poured after bad — until there is a major shake-up of management and a major restructuring of Hydro.

More elecricity sought for export only: NDPer

B.C. Hydro is building more power generating capacity so that it can export electricity to the United States, Lorne Nicolson (NDP—Nelson-Creston) charged Thursday.

Hydro has applied to the National Energy Board for permission to export electricity to the Bonneville Power Authority in Oregon for five years beginning Oct. 1, 1979, Nicolson said in the legislature.

He said these exports will include three billion kilowatt hours a year of firm power and 10 billion kilowatt hours a year of interruptable power. The licence would replace an exisiting permit which expires Sept. 30.

The bill received approval by a vote of 28 to 21.

Nicolson said the amount Hydro proposes to export represents 54 per cent of the domestic consumption for the year 1978.

He said Hydro is seeking the additional $750 million "in order that we can generate surplus electricity in order that we can sell it to the United States."

"They are not building for the needs of the people of B.C. but to build for export."

Energy Minister Jim Hewitt, a member of the Hydro board of directors, said Hydro's costs are in proportion to that of other utilities in Canada, "and if Hydro's out of control, then so are the other three major ones."

Hewitt said he hopes Hydro will concentrate more on finding alternative sources of energy. He also said the government's promised energy policy, which will include Hydro, will be made public before September.

Assured sailings

A new reservation system should make travelling easier for users of the Washington State Ferries' run from Anacortes to Sidney, the state deparment of transporation said Thursday.

Although a reservation will not be required on the route from now through Sept. 22, the department said it will assure a vehicle space on the ferry if the motorist arrives at the departure terminal at least one hour before sailing time.

Reservations can be made only in person the day before the desired sailing, and vehicle tickets must be purchased at that time.

Nitty gritty urged

Labor Minister Allan Williams said Thursday the federal government must clarify its policy on accepting refugees.

Williams said Ottawa is asking the provinces to go along with increasing the number of refugees allowed into Canada, but has not outlined what the federal program entails or how many refugees will be coming into the country.

He said there has to be a more-structured means of dealing with the problem so refugees are not left on their own in Canada after having been cast adrift from their own homeland.

Williams said only six per cent of the refugees entering the country have located in B.C.

For high production and low cost per yard, Progressive Contracting chose the Cat D5B Tractor.

It was the first tractor buy for Progressive Contracting Ltd. of Richmond. It had to be right. So equipment manager Bill Den Duyf rented a Cat D5 Tractor and worked it for six months. Hard. He liked its power, its performance, its production. Now, Progressive's new D5B is spreading over 100,000 cu.ft. of sandstone fill to a depth of four feet over fifteen acres of a new subdivision in Richmond—productively and profitably.

"The D5B is just the right size for us," says Bill Den Duyf. "It's an excellent clean-up machine."

For dozing dirt, ripping rock, grading, backfilling, landscaping and utility work, the D5B gives you big tractor features in a mid-size machine: power to spare from the gutsy 638 cu.in. displacement Cat 3306 diesel engine; powershift transmission for single-lever, on-the-go shifting under full load; a sealed and lubricated track for long wear life and low maintenance; and a range of work tools as tough-built as the machines they serve.

But if they're tough to beat, they're easy to buy. Finning will design a flexible lease, purchase or rental plan keyed to your type of operation, your type of jobs. And we'll make sure your Cat D5B Tractor keeps working and earning—with unmatched Cat Plus service through 51 Finning locations.

Paperworkers strike vote

The Canadian Paperworkers Union will conduct a strike vote next week after breaking off negotiations Thursday with pulp and paper industry employers.

Union vice-president Art Gruntman said strike votes will be conducted after the 50 provincial delegates attending talks here return home to report to union members.

Talks came to a standstill after the union refused to negotiate an employer proposal to reduce mill shutdown statutory holidays to two days from six, the union said.

Chris Crombie, Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau communications director, said individual employees would still receive six statutory holidays if mills were to remain open those additional four days.

Union delegates also informed employers a contract cannot be reached unless retirement pensions improve.

"We are disappointed that CPU wage delegates have chosen to break off talks and go home," said Dick Lester, chief management negotiator.

The industrial relations bureau negotiates with the three logging industry unions, the CPU, Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada and the International Woodworkers of America, for 15 pulp and paper manufacturers in B.C.

The paperworkers union contract expires June 30.

The union wants pay raises of 15 per cent in each year of a two-year contract. The employers have offered a 65-cent-a-hour increase in the first year and a 6 per cent increase in the second year.

He said it is too early to make predictions about the effect strike action would have on United States newspaper owners facing a newsprint shortage.

B.C. produces about 15 per cent of Canada's newsprint and is a major supplier for American newspapers, who get 65 per cent of their newsprint from Canada.

Meanwhile, Local 8 of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada have accepted a management proposal for a first-aid station at the nearby Harmac mill of MacMillan-Bloedel, a union spokesman said Thursday.

The first-aid issue caused several days of walkouts by union members earlier this month.

The union spokesman said the company has been asked to staff the station 24 hours a day after it is built and provide a new ambulance. A trailer will be moved to the site near the mill's wood room until the new station is completed.

'Major progress' seen in IWA talks

B.C. forest industry and union bargainers have made major progress in their delicate negotiations despite continued wildcat walkouts by woodworkers on Vancouver Island.

Jack Munro, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, said Thursday what would have been "a major stumbling block" in negotiations was removed when the company came up with a better deal on pensions.

"If we understand the proposal correctly, this is a major move towards resolving the pension issue," said Munro. "They've improved their proposal substantially."

No details of the proposal were released.

Meanwhile, the majority of the 4,000 members in the Duncan IWA local — upset by what they feel is a slow pace in negotiations — continued their walkout.

About a dozen area saw mills and logging camps were not working as a result, said local president Ken McEwan.

"I'm afraid it's going to spread everywhere," McEwan said. "It's gaining support and it looks like it's going to snowball."

An industry-wide strike by the IWA, which would be the first since 1959, would cripple the province's forest industry, its economic backbone.

He said IWA informational picket lines — which had earlier shut down non-IWA operations at MacMillan Bloedel's pulp mill at Harmac and B.C. Forest Product's Crofton mill — were lifted Thursday, one after the Labor Relations Board issued a cease-and-desist order.

But while minor union officers warned of the seriousness of the situation, senior union officials and industry spokesman played it down.

"This is peanuts," one IWA spokesman said, noting that during negotiations for a new contract in 1974 "upwards of 80 percent of the membership was wildcatting and the employer still talked."

Munro had earlier asked members publicly to return to work and give union negotiators, currently bargaining for 40,000 woodworkers on the coast and in the southern interior, another week to 10 days to reach agreement.

Chris Crombie, spokesman for Forest Industrial Relations, bargaining agent for 120 companies on the coast, said the industry would not break talks while bargaining is going so smoothly.

The woodworkers have been offered a 60-cents-an-hour rais in the first year of a two-year contraet and six percent in the second. The union wants $1.50 an hour increase in a one-year agreement on a current hourly base rate of $8.16.

At Gold River, about 200 workers at the Tahsis Co. logging division near this small community on Vancouver Island walked off the job Thursday to protest spraying of the herbicide 2,4-D on access roads.

A company spokesman said the spraying was carried out with full permits and proper authorization.

NOTICE TO SAANICH

DOG OWNERS

As a convenience to dog owners and to provide employment opportunities, a house-to-house dog licence canvass has commenced in the Municipality of Saanich.

Canvassers are provided with dog licence tags, receipt books and identification and are authorized to collect fees and issue licences at the door. You are requested to immediately affix the dog licence and advised to retain your receipt. Your co-operation when the canvasser calls will be appreciated.

The Animals By-law No. 2893 reads in part as follows:

"Any person who owns, possesses or harbours any dog over the age of six months shall obtain a licence therefor in accordance with the provisions of this by-law on or before the first day of February in each year, provided however, that if he becomes the owner, possessor or harbourer of a dog after the first day of February in any year, he shall obtain a licence therefor forthwith.

A portion of the fee schedule from the said by-law is as follows:

"(1) For every dog over the age of six months:
  (a) The sum of $5.00 for each male dog.
  (b) The sum of $5.00 for each spayed female dog provided, however, that a certificate from a veterinary surgeon to the effect that a female has been spayed shall be accepted in lieu of the licence fee for the calendar year in which the same was spayed.
  (c) The sum of $15.00 for each female dog which is not spayed."

For further particulars, reference should be made to By-law No. 2893.

Pro-life group defeated

SURREY (CP) — Surrey Memorial Hospital's pro-abortion policy appeared to survive a close pro-life challenge Wednesday night but a second recount is expected before the outcome is settled.

A crowd of nearly 2,500 jammed a recreation centre here to elect three members to the hospital's 11-member board of trustees.

If pro-lifers had won all three seats, the board would have been dominated by persons intent on eliminating abortions under any circumstances at the hospital.

A recount was ordered after 44 votes separated six candidates, with two anti-abortionists and one pro-abortionist topping the ballot.

The recount overturned the first result and placed two so-called pro-choice candidates at the top followed by a pro-life advocate.

"I would assume that as soon as we can determine, the procedure for another recount it will be conducted as soon as possible," hospital board chairman Merv Thorne said as a box containing the ballots was sealed.

Last year, there were 557 abortions performed at Surrey Memorial Hospital while 1,836 babies were delivered.

Port to expand

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday that the new federal Progressive Conservative government has assured him that port expansion at Prince Rupert will proceed as soon as possible.

The premier made the statement in a speech to investment executives shortly after arriving here from a visit to Ottawa and Toronto.

He said the question of port expansion at Prince Rupert was discussed in Ottawa and Prime Minister Clark agreed that a new terminal is needed to handle rapidly-growing mineral production in northern B.C.

Escaper guilty

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — An American prison escaper who threatened to cut off the fingers of an immigration worker during a hostage-taking last December has been found guilty of forcible seizure and possession of a dangerous weapon.

Dewey Sigo, 22, who took Elsie Wanless hostage at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre in nearby Burnaby, said in county court Wednesday that he acted out of frustration with prison conditions, abuse from guards and discrimination against Indians.

Sigo had escaped from Walla Walla Penitentiary in Washington state where he was serving a five-year term for assualt with a deadly weapon and was being held at the Burnaby prison after being picked up in southeastern British Columbia.

$70M mill slated

QUESNEL (CP) — West Fraser Mills Ltd. announced Thursday it will build a $70 million thermo-mechanical pulp mill here.

Company president Doug Johnston said the mill, which will employ about 70 persons, should be in operation by December, 1981.

He said the mill will improve the flow of wood chips in the region and help sawmills balance chip production.

Today's Markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The stock market was sharply higher in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Among industrials, Argus leaped ahead 3½ to $28½, Chrysler 3⅛ to $12¼, Noranda 1½ to $51¼, Westburne 1¼ to $47¾ and Gulf 1¼ to $63¼.

Dome Pete dropped 1⅝ to $49¼, Cadillac Fairview ¾ to $18¼ and Union Gas A ¼ to $11¼.

In mines, Hollinger A advanced three to $42⅜, McIntyre 1½ to $52 and United Siscoe 1¼ to $10⅜.

Among oils, Canadian Superior gained four to $148, Skye one to $7⅝ and Page ⅞ to $17⅞. Quasar down ½ at $12¼ and Numac ½ at $38.

Trading halts were called at the opening in Hudson's Bay Co., which last traded at $28½, and in Simpsons Ltd., which last traded at $3.25. The companies have been holding preliminary discussions on a possible merger.

A halt was also called in Maplex Management and Holdings Ltd., which last traded at $11, pending an announcement.

Trading was briefly halted in Asbestos Corp., which filed suit in Quebec Superior Court Friday to prevent its expropriation by the Quebec government. The stock was down ¾ to $45½.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street added to Thursday's gains with another moderate advance.

Analysts said the $2.6 billion decline in the money supply reported by the Federal Reserve late Thursday helped keep the rally going.

The drop eased fears, provoked by a record $6.9 billion increase the week before, that the Federal Reserve might soon tighten credit further.

Meanwhile, Wall Streeters were cautiously awaiting next Tuesday's meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to set pricing and production policies.

Bally Manufacturing, which holds a dominant position in the slot-machine market, fell 2 to $41⅞ after a 2½-point drop Thursday. New Jersey authorities ruled that casinos in Atlantic City may not purchase more than half their slot machines from any single producer.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — Oil shares were firmer while most other industrials were easier at the close of moderate trading.

Government stocks were easier despite firmness in the sterling, with long dates losing up to ¼ point.

Canadian issues eased.

Human resources key to food industry: expert

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian food service industry can continue to be a dynamic, vibrant sector of the economy but it will have to take steps to ensure continued growth in the next decade, a Toronto marketing expert says.

Roy MacNaughton, president of Hospitality Marketing, told the Foodservice Outlook Conference that the food service industry's biggest problem is "effective management of human resources."

MacNaughton said a 300-per-cent turnover is unacceptable for a healthy industry. He said motivation must go hand-in-hand with increased productivity in such a labor-intensive business.

He also suggested that growth should slowly give way to efficiency and that success should be measured "not in the market share but in the rise of worker output."

The $13 billion-a-year industry indirectly provides work for almost one million Canadians.

MacNaughton said food service specialists should be able to appreciate marketplace trends while also giving greater thought to energy controls and conservation. Government regulation and "excessive taxation," particularly at the provincial level, must also be fought.

"Sure, things are going to get tougher, a lot tougher, particularly in the area of human resources' management, but I get very excited when I think of all the new food service markets I see developing now and in the future."

MacNaughton said there is no good reason why there should be animosity between supermarkets and restaurants, referring to so-called retaliation advertising campaigns from food retail chains urging customers to "eat out at home."

He warned that such problems as stagflation — an inflationary period without a corresponding increase in production — facing the American economy will seriously affect the Canadian hospitality industry.

Brent Davis, food services director at the University of Calgary, told the conference there is a need for greater creativity in all sectors of the food service industry.

Davis called for a symbiotic relationship where food processors will react almost instantaneously to the trends noticed by those managing institutional food services. He said there is an urgent need for qualified personnel in the food service industry, especially those willing to work weekends.

Bonds may yield bonus

TORONTO (CP) — Bank of Canada officials are anxious to remind holders of about $3 billion in Canada Savings Bonds that they are entitled to a bonus Nov. 1.

The bonus plan was introduced in 1974 in an attempt to stop a flood of redemptions in a period of rapidly rising interest rates.

Officials say the problem stems from the fact that the bonds show no reference to the bonus provisions.

For bonds maturing after Nov. 1, a second bunus will be paid when they come due.

Eligible for the bonds are Series 22, 23, 25, 26, 27 and 28.

The bonuses will go to about one million individual holders of bonds bought in 1967, 1968, 1970, 1971, 1972 and 1973.

For example, the interim payment on Series 23 is $23.50 in November and $11.75 at maturity in 1982.

Tax cuts investors

TORONTO (CP) — Capital gains tax must be abolished if Canadians are to take control of their economy, C. Douglas Reekie, president of CAE Industries Ltd., says.

He told shareholders at the annual meeting their numbers have been halved since the introduction of the tax by the federal government in 1972. The number of CAE shareholders has dropped to 2,400 from 4,800 eight years ago.

Considering the Toronto-based company's improving returns in the electronic technology field, the declining number of shareowners means "the investing public is saying something about taxing policies as they apply to equity investment," said Reekie.

"But those who cry the loudest about foreign ownership are the very ones who have encouraged and led the fight for taxing policies which have made it less and less attractive for individuals to invest in Canadian equity shares."

At the meeting, shareholders of the fully Canadian-owned company approved a three-for-one split of the class A shares and the split of class B shares into an unlimited number of common shares.

The splits may encourage more Canadians to buy Canadian stocks, said Reekie.

Journalists walk out

MONTREAL (CP) — Present, a daily public affairs program of the French network of the CBC, was not broadcast Thursday because about 20 journalists staged a study session to protest a mangement decision not to renew the contracts of three colleagues. In a statement, the journalists said the move may be connected to a union organizing drive.

Squeeze on banks of great interest

TORONTO (CP) — The squeeze on domestic interest rates has put the squeeze on chartered banks' profits.

The squeeze, the difference between the interest the banks pay for deposits and what they charge for loans, helped produce the lowest rate of profit growth in two years for the three months ending April 30.

Profits for the nine largest banks were $229 million in the period, up 7.1 per cent from the same quarter last year.

Gains in the four quarters of fiscal 1978 were 20.6 per cent, 36.2 per cent, 32.7 per cent and 41.5 per cent.

The banks were paying higher rates on term deposits, as high as 11.5 per cent for one type, while the prime lending rate was 12 per cent. Normally, the spread is much larger.

Other factors contributed to the slowdown in profit growth.

Foreign operations had similar problems. Demand deposits declined more than normal and were replaced with funds the banks had to buy, with interest.

Robot tellers not far off

OTTAWA (UPC) — In the near future machines will take the place of tellers in the country's banks, according to Gordon Bell, president of the Canadian Bankers' Association.

Customers making simple deposits and withdrawals may soon be using an automatic teller, he said. Several banks already have 24-hour banking facilities where a customer punches in an account number and inserts an identity card. Seconds later the money slips out of a slot.

The automatic tellers will eventually save the banks money and save customers' time, he said.

Plastics firms buck gov't rules

TORONTO (CP) — Riding on an industry-wide high in sales, plastics manufacturers are planning more coordinated action against what they fear is increasing government regulation.

Paul Szasz, chairman of the Society of the Plastics Industry of Canada, said in a recent interview that the industry wants to "try to get ahead of the regulatory authorities by having our house in order beforehand."

The society plans to alert its members to areas of potential regulation.

Szasz believes the industry is subject to over-regulation because it is new and threatens manufacturers of other materials.

These enemies of the plastics industry often start the rows that lead to greater regulation, he said.

Small firms face computer hang-up

CALGARY (CP) — More and more small businessmen are being forced to use computers, says a management consultant with J. E. Peterson and Associates (Canada) Inc.

But small businessmen are so involved in the day-to-day running of their enterprise that they are unable to take the time to learn how to operate a data-processing system or to find out what type of computer system is best suited to their needs, said David Hicks.

He told a Calgary Chamber of Commerce seminar that small businessmen should hire computer consultants so staff are not tied up for long periods trying to choose a system and make it work.

But before they look for a consultant, they should evaluate whether they really need a computer.

Businesses that are continually late with financial reports or those with ongoing inventory problems are logical candidate, Hicks said.

"If you are a small businessman and you never seem to have what your customers want when they need it, or if your storage space is jammed with products that aren't selling, then a data-processing system with inventory control might be the answer."

New bank eyes more branch services

CALGARY (CP) — Continental Bank of Canada has been in business only two weeks, but bank officials are already considering accelerating plans to strengthen branch operations.

Continental, wholly-owned subsidiary of IAC Ltd. of Toronto, became the country's newest chartered bank June 4 when it opened eight full-service branches and 133 select-service branches.

Doug Maloney, continental vice-chairman and chief executive officer, said Monday the plan was to wait until after Jan. 1 before starting to convert the smaller branches to full-service operations.

"Now I think our momentum is telling us we'll have to move faster than originally planned."

Customer demand would require more services.

The select-service branches provide loans and take only term deposits, while the larger branches provide services found in most Canadian banks.

Continental, Canada's eighth-largest bank, will initially emphasize loans to small and medium-sized businesses.

Financial reversal forecast

TORONTO (CP) — Investors should tighten their belts for a reversal in the strong performance of Canadian financial markets, economist John Grant of Wood Gundy Ltd. told a seminar this week.

Grant said rising savings and moderate borrowing demand, which have been supporting the markets, will soon end.

Private corporations will be looking for more money in the next year and demand for mortgage money will be up, he told a Data Resources of Canada seminar.

With continuing large demands by the federal government and the Bank of Canada's tight money supply policy, interest rates for long-term borrowings will be up, Grant said.

He admitted to being surprised by the high rate of economic growth reported in the first quarter, but expects a sharp drop in the next two or three quarters.

As a result, companies face a squeeze on profits, he said.

Although Grant thinks the inflation rate will fall to a seven-per-cent annual rate by the end of the year, it may be pushed up in 1980 by higher wages.

Health problems plague Alert Bay, inquiry told

ALERT BAY (CP) — A brief submitted to an inquiry into health services in this remote village says the native Indian community of 1,000 is plagued with severe alcohol problems, children's diseases and unsatisfactory sanitary conditions.

Dr. Mary Hapgood, a federal Indian affairs department health director, said the Nimpkish band has estimated that alcohol adversely affects about 90 per cent of Indian families in the village on Comorant Island off the northeast tip of Vancouver Island.

Documents at St. George's hospital here, she said, show that about 30 per cent of all patients appear to suffer from alcohol problems, while one doctor has estimated the figure is closer to 90 per cent.

The inquiry, headed by Dr. George Ballam, followed the recent death of Renee Smith, an 11-year-old native Indian girl, who died of a ruptured appendix and severe peritonitis after being treated with painkillers in hospital for five days.

A coroner's jury found Dr. Jack Pickup, the attending physician, negligent in dispensing his services and in hospital procedures.

Local officials had asked for the inquiry prior to the girl's death.

Local Indian bands have boycotted the inquiry, held behind closed doors, labelling it a farce and a whitewash. They want a full public hearing with a judge as chairman.

Hapgood's written submission to the seven-member inquiry said local bands had experienced difficulties in getting provincial officials to fund programs to combat alcoholism.

She said the Nimpkish band tried to set up a program with an alcohol counsellor and a drug drop-in centre in 1976, but were unable to get assistance from either the human resources ministry or the attorney-general's department.

After several delays, she said, the band was able to get funding from the National Native Alcohol Abuse program.

Ms. Hapgood said Indian children in the area generally are well-served, with regular health examinations at school, but still suffer from ear diseases, visual defects, dental disease and difficulties in growing mentally, emotionally and physically.

Poor nutrition, alcohol and smoking all contribute to the problems.

She said garbage disposal in the area also is unsatisfactory.

"An open dump on the reserve is too near the houses and is attracting rats," she said.

Minister labelled racist

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the United Native Nations accused Health Minister Bob McClelland Thursday of acting in a racist manner in his actions following the death of an 11-year-old native Indian girl in hospital in Alert Bay Jan. 22.

Bill Wilson said McClelland should have suspended the licence of Dr. Jack Pickup, the attending physician, after he was found negligent at a coroner's inquest.

Wilson said McClelland would have suspended Pickup's licence if the girl had been white. He said the minister acted in a racist manner and is attempting to sweep Indians under the table.

He also said McClelland should have taken steps to ensure that certain people in Alert Bay, a small village on Comorant Island off the northeast tip of Vancouver Island, have input into any inquiry.

The coroner's inquest jury investigating the death of Renee Smith, who died of a ruptured appendix and severe peritonitis, recommended a public inquiry be held to look at health services in the area.

The inquiry, headed by Dr. Charles Ballam, started Wednesday behind closed doors, but local Indian bands are boycotting it. They want a full public inquiry.

Uranium hunt cancelled

CASTLEGAR (CP) — There will be no uranium exploration in the China Creek area near Genelle in southeastern British Columbia, a royal commission inquiry into uranium mining was told Thursday.

Manny Amendologine, whose firm China Creek Consortium Ltd. and two others did preliminary exploration in the area last year, said the companies did not want to get into confrontations with area residents.

He said his firm "is not in the buisness of fighting people."

Last year, three men were arrested after a road leading to a uranium exploration site was blocked.

The three were later given an absolute discharge by a judge who said they were guilty of a crime but had acted with reasonable concern for their own safety and the safety of the community.

China Creek supplies drinking water to Genelle, a community of 200 about 23 kilometres south of Castlegar.

The three-member inquiry, headed by Dr. David Bates, is holding hearings in sevecal communities.

CRTC hears new 'media giant'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Western-based broadcasting interests collided with some of their eastern shareholders Thursday as the Canadian Radio-television Telecommunications Commission heard an application for the establishment of a new media giant.

Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd. and Premier Cablevision Ltd., Vancouver-based companies with holdings in other parts of the country, notably in Ontario, told the commission that approval of their application would set up a firm comparable in size and capabilities with existing broadcasting corporations centred in the east.

But if the application was not approved, the companies might fall to takeover bids from Eastern Canada, particularly Toronto, added J. R. Peters, president of Western Broadcasting.

However, Beland Honderich, chairman of Torstar Corp., a 33-per-cent shareholder in Western, told the commission that the Western-Premier proposal would set up a potential conflict of interest and diminish the value of shares held by minority owners. Torstar Corp. publishes the country's largest newspaper, the Toronto Star.

Honderich's opposition was backed by another minority shareholder, Connor Clark and Co. of Toronto, which holds eight per cent of the shares of Premier Cablevision.

Several other groups intervened in the federal regulatory agency's hearings, arguing that Western and Premier had not revealed enough information about their plans to justify approval. The commission reserved a decision.

Peters, outlining plans of the proposed new company, said the first major project for the firm would be to establish a television program and film production subsidiary permanently based on the West Coast.

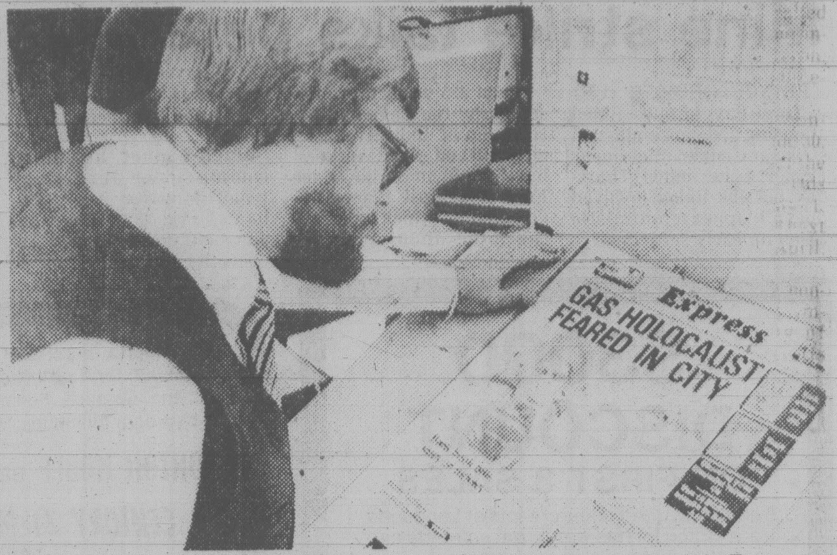
A new British Columbia-based technical research and development firm would be established and a community relations and research subsidiary would be set up to explore the public's social, cultural and economic attitudes, added Peters.

The new company would hold 55 per cent of Western's shares, 50.5 per cent of Premier's shares and would make a public share offering. Promoters of the plan, including Peters, pledged to recycle dividends and profits earned in the existing companies into the new firm.

Among Western's holdings are a 50-per-cent interest in B.C. Television and AM and FM radio operations in New Westminster, B.C., Hamilton, Winnipeg and Calgary. Premier has cablevision licences in Vancouver, Victoria, New Westminster, parts of Toronto, Mississauga and Oakville, Ont.

Peters said if the commission approved the application, it would be making a decision in favor of the company headquarters remaining in B.C.

Later, Western chairman Frank Griffiths said Premier Bill Bennett had sent a telegram to the commission supporting the application. The telegram, which was too late to be entered as an intervention at the hearing, said the B.C. government favored local ownership.



Express
GAS HOLOCAUST FEARED IN CITY

Express bows out

VANCOUVER (CP) — They toasted the first issue of the Express with white wine 7½ months ago. Thursday night, they said goodbye with beer.

A cheerful crowd of reporters, editors and well-wishers gathered at the Vancouver Press Club to say farewell to the striker-run newspaper that helped 1,400 workers meet mortgage payments and pay grocery bills since a strike-lockout shut down the morning Province and evening Sun last Nov. 1.

Any nostalgia at the passing of the ragtag paper, which started in a barren office furnished with rented typewriters and makeshift desks, was submerged by optimism that Vancouver's two major dailies would soon be back on the street.

The hope of a quick return to work seemed based mainly on a move by the B.C. Federation of Labor to intervene directly in the dispute by acting as negotiator for the pressmen's and drivers' unions at the strikebound papers.

The two unions had held out against four others in the six-union joint bargaining council by rejecting management's latest offer calling for wage increases of 34.25 per cent in a 40-month contract.

The Express' last edition said in a front-page story that management and the federation met for three hours Thursday, that the talks were bound in secrecy, but that both management and workers were preparing for a return to work.

There was speculation that the arrival of two new newspapers on the scene would have made the Express' position untenable. The Daily News, a morning broadsheet, started publication Tuesday. The Courier, a suburban weekly tabloid, goes daily on July 4.

A major problem cited in the shutdown was that the Express has had to scramble continuously for newsprint.

Stories also circulated of the dockside exploits of Express representatives in spiriting paper across picket lines set up by striking longshoremen who held up shipments for the better part of a week.

'Top' pact approved by miners

ASHCROFT (CP) — A contract that one union leader calls the best in the copper industry has been signed between Bethlehem Mines Ltd. and the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers.

Les Walton, president of the union's Local 8, said Thursday the 325 workers at Bethlehem's open-pit mine ratified the new pact by a vote of 82 per cent.

The agreement, which provides total wage increases of about 25 per cent over two years, was called "the top contract in the industry," by Peter Cameron, the union's regional vice-president.

Under the current contract, which expires June 30, the journeyman's rate at the mine is $9.11 an hour. This will rise to $10.02 July 1, $10.22 Jan. 1, 1980, $10.96 next July and to $11.44 by April, 1981.

Walton also said the contract made strides in improving the wording of clauses dealing with layoffs and other matters.

Mine strike talks peter out

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Three days of talks aimed at ending a violence-plagued strike at Endako mines near Fraser Lake ended Thursday but the union involved doesn't appear optimistic about an early settlement.

About 485 workers, represented by the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, have been on strike since Feb. 14 against Placer Development, which operates the mine about 160 kilometres west of this central British Columbia city.

Hugh Ladner, appointed commissioner June 12 by Labor Minister Allan Williams, said both the company and the union were co-operative in talks.

Princess Pat wins pollution stay

VANCOUVER (CP) — A ruling Thursday by the United States Coast Guard has assured another year of operation for Canadian Pacific's Alaska cruise liner, Princess Patricia.

The ruling, which will enable the ship to operate through the 1980 cruise season, grants Canadian Pacific a temporary exemption in meeting new U.S. environmental regulations. The regulations require all vessels operating in U.S. coastal waters after January 30, 1980, to be fitted with a marine sanitation device.

R. L. Purdy, general manager of coastal marine operations for CP Rail, said the exemption allows the company to continue its successful cruise operation "and keep our options open for a further 12 months to find a suitable replacement vessel."

The Princess Patricia's improved results in 1978, after two marginal seasons, led to reversal of an earlier company decision to retire the ship at the end of last year's season.

The Princess Patricia was built in 1948 and underwent a major conversion in 1963 in preparation for summer cruising.

Studies undertaken by CP Rail indicate that retro-fitting a full sanitation system would be very costly, and that given the short remaining lifetime of the ship — estimated at three years — the installation could not be economically justified.

Coal-to-Romania development environmental effect queried

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A sprawling open-pit coal mining development planned in northeastern B.C. could be an environmental nightmare, says the government biologist for the area.

Fred Harper, biologist with the provincial fish and wildlife department in Fort. St. John, said in a telephone interview Thursday that announcement of the development caught him by surprise — especially as the company has yet to file the second part of a required environmental impact report.

Quintette Coal Ltd. announced Wednesday it had signed a deal to sell Romania up to 30 million tonnes of metallurgical coal over a 20-year period from its property east of McLeod Lake, about 95 kilometres northeast of both Dawson Creek and Chetwynd.

The mining development will be accompanied by construction of a new town of between 5,000 and 10,000 people at Tumbler Ridge as well as new railway and road connections.

Harper said that by law coal mine developers must submit a preliminary report outling the project, environmental impact and reclamation procedures. This report must be followed by another adding more detail and filling in the gaps.

"Normally this has to be submitted for approval," Harper said. "I haven't seen it."

Harper said the 100,000-acre Quintette property lies around Babcock Mountain, east of the Sukunka River drainage basin.

Zeballos health clinic conditions probed

Health Minister Bob McClelland is to receive a report on conditions at the Zeballos medical clinic on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Health director Dr. Kenneth Benson of the Upper Island Health Unit visited Zeballos last week in response to an appeal from the village and is expected to submit his report to McClelland next week.

Doctors Deborah Brown and Arthur Harpur, a husband-and-wife team who visit Zeballos weekly from their base in Tahsis, say the tiny three-room building, rented by the village for $200 a year from the Nootka Mission Association, has inadequate lighting, poor plumbing and no storage place for patients' files and essential equipment.

Harpur said the building is also used as a bunkhouse for transient tree planters.

Village clerk Mrs. Peggy Kirk says Dennis Cocke, health minister for the former NDP government, sanctioned construction of a new clinic but another public ministry instead suggested a public works building be built to accommodate the clinic.

CUPE cool to offer

Negotiators for five locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees are recommending rejection of the "fifth final offer" from the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association.

The offer came at a meeting Thursday between the GVLRA, CUPE's Joint Negotiating Committee and mediator Clark Gilmour.

JNC spokesman Jim Walker said today the negotiators feel there is no substantial improvement in the latest offer over other "final offers" from the core municipalities.

He said it will take a week for the five locals, representing about 1,800 employees, to vote on the offer.

GVLRA manager Carl Anshelm said today he was surprised that the negotiators are recommending rejection.

Helicopter ambulance service slated for B.C.

A Vancouver group is planning an air ambulance-rescue helicopter service for B.C.

The service is being organized by the Coast Mountain Air Rescue Society which was organized in January. It's hoped to have the service operating by September.

Society officials were in Victoria on Thursday to talk to the Victoria Rotary Club and meet Labor Minister Allan Williams.

Operations manager Stephen Mullins, a pilot, said the service will operate out of Jericho in Vancouver, using a long-range helicopter which would be equipped for medical services and accommodate two patients and two personnel.

He said it would have a radius of 250 kilometres which could reach three-quarters of Vancouver Island.

Society president George Zilahi said the service will be financed by grants and donations from various agencies, and from billing the provincial health emergency services for work carried out. He said one foundation has already offered $100,000 providing the provincial government back the service.

Mullins said the service will be similar to one in Sydney, Australia, which is featured in the television series Chopper Squad. While the service will be primarily for the transportation of the sick it will also be available for rescue missions, Mullins said.

He said an ambulance helicopter is on duty around-the-clock in Banff National Park and an experimental service is operating in Ontario.

In Switzerland, the Swiss Air Rescue has nine helicopters.

Mullins said he had talked to Dr. A.C. Pickles, just-retired executive director of Royal Jubilee Hospital, who agreed such a service could be valuable.

Mullins said he became convinced the service is necessary when he was part of a Provincial Emergency Program rescue team which had to literally carry people down mountainsides because conventional aircraft couldn't reach them.

He said the helicopter will be equipped with a crane that can be lowered to haul a large basket beneath the aircraft to carry in medical personnel to mountainous regions. A stretcher to carry out the victim would also be available.

The helicopter, he said, could land at the scene of highway accidents.

Police launch shooting inquiry

An investigation is under way into the police shooting of a suspected prowler in a dry-cleaning store in Brentwood Monday night.

Central Saanich police chief Bob Miles said today the investigation, required under the firearms regulation section of the Police Act, is being carried out by Sgt. Ross Yuill, a veteran member of the department.

Miles said Yuill is expected to complete his report early next week.

On Monday, Const. Neil Lang, 43, a 13-year member of the force, was investigating a break-in at Fay's Brentwood One Hour Cleaners when he was confronted by a man carrying what Laing took to be weapon.

Laing fired a warning shot and ordered the man to drop the object. When the man didn't, Laing fired three more times. Two of the shots struck the man in his chest and shoulder.

The man, identified as John Pilatzke, 32, of 4533 Densmore remains in stable but improving condition in Victoria General Hospital.

School worker jailed after theft scandal

OTTAWA (CP) — A high school technician who encouraged a student to steal cars was sentenced Thursday to one year in jail by County Court Judge Jean-Marie Bordeleau.

Bordeleau said Edmond Racine, 34, had shown no scruples whatever when he helped a La Salle high school student dismantle a stolen car and later recruited him to steal again.

Racine pleaded guilty to two charges related to auto theft.

Vote set for Saturday

A referendum Saturday will ask Metchosin residents whether they want the Capital Regional District to borrow up to $725,000 on their behalf to purchase the Metchosin golf course and an adjacent 15 acres for recreational purposes.

But even if the expenditure is approved the outcome of the proposal will remain in doubt until July, when the provincial government indicates whether a $216,000 grant will be forthcoming.

The proposal envisages leasing the golf course to the Metchosin Golf Club, whose lease payment to the CRD would cover annual debt charges on the course itself.

Residents have been told that debt charges on the 15-acre tract would amount to $9,820 per year over 20 years.

To a homeowner whose property is assessed at $60,000 the annual cost is estimated at $7.56, before the homeowner grant is taken into account.

Equestrian facilities, tennis courts and softball and baseball fields are some of the uses proposed for the land.

Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday at Metchosin Elementary School, 611 Happy Valley Road.

At times, a day player graduates

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Scott's World

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Day players constitute the preponderance of Screen Actors Guild members, men and women who earn a precarious living with small parts in movies and television.

They are a cut above screen extras, who have their own guild. But day players are paid on a daily basis and usually are hired to read only a few lines.

Virtually thousands of day players are seen as cops, doormen, cab drivers, waitresses, hairdressers or newspaper reporters filling out casts with minuscule roles. Necessary but negligible.

Extras are a different breed. Many are not actors at all. They are resigned to being "atmosphere people," the faces in the crowd at football games or banquets. They are allowed to shout or applaud but not to read lines.

Not so the day player who dreams of becoming a full fledged actor, hired by the week or the month. Rare is the day player who doesn't believe that stardom is just around the corner.

Occasionally a day player does lift himself from the pack and establish himself as a bonafide actor.

Such a one is Gordon Jump who plays Arthur Carlson, the choleric radio station owner in the TV series WKRP In Cincinnati. It took Jump 15 years in the trenches to finally find his niche.

A tenacious, heavy-set, balding man with melancholy eyes, Jump arrived in Hollywood in 1963 to fulfill his dream of becoming an actor after years of working in radio, usually as a production assistant, in Topeka, Kan., Dayton, Ohio, and New York City.

He supported himself, his wife and two daughters, as a lecturer for a cemetery, teaching special classes in radio at Southern California, punching out credit cards for an oil company and whatever else he could find.

"Commercials took the place of a repertory company for me," Jump said recently. "I got most of my on-camera training in commercials.

"You convince yourself there's a part out there somewhere that's perfect for you and if you have the discipline to hang in there long enough you and the role will find each other."

That was precisely the case a couple of years ago when the producers of the Soap series were looking for a blustering, inept chief of police. Jump auditioned for the part and was astonished when he was told he had the part.

"Last year, although I had another year to run on my contract, the Soap's director, Jay Sandrich, wanted me for the part for the station owner in WKRP.

"The Soap producers were good enough to write me out of the script and I became Arthur Carlson, another role that I knew was just right.

"Carlson is a combination of the men who mismanage radio stations, types I used to work with in my radio days."

Jump harbors little hope of superstardom, but it's not important. Gordon Jump is satisfied that he's no longer a day player and probably never will be again.

Sportsmen fined

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec Tourism, Fish and Game department handed out fines to 9,372 violators of fish and game regulations, adding $627,968 to public coffers. The totals are slightly lower than last year, the department said in a statement.

CTV gets prize for concert

PRAGUE (Reuter) — A film produced by the Canadian Television network won the award for the best TV interpretation of a concert work at the Prague international television festival Thursday.

The film won the award on the strength of using Igor Stravinsky's ballet score The Rites of Spring as its background music.

The main prize in the drama category went to the Soviet production Arvika.

British directors Anne Head and Brian Parker won the best directors award with the BBC entry Donald and Sally in the best drama category.

The Irish TV program, With Deep Regret, was awarded the prize for the best screenplay.

The Spanish entry The Second Tree of Guernica won the Czechoslovak television viewers' prize while the press prize in the drama category went to Austria's All Are Almost Widows.

Bowes a shining star

Victoria's own Geoffrey Bowes brings Billy Budd to life

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

It's a good handful of years since a group of ardent Victoria theatre fans trouped up to Brentwood College at Mill Bay to see a production of the play, Billy Budd.

Quality-minded theatre people knew the director of the play, Gil Bunch, through his notable stage creations in the Victoria area.

Practically nobody knew anything about the teen-ager who brought a striking intensity and heartbreaking simplicity to the role of the tragic young seaman.

His name was Geoffrey Bowes, a name currently being quoted in the Toronto press as belonging to an actor of exceptional attributes, one who may well soon be widely regarded as among Canada's best.

Film, stage and television roles have fallen to the former Victorian, the latest a lead with Ann-Margret (as her son) and Bruce Dern in a Robert Cooper-Ronald Cohen production called Middle-Age Crazy. Sequences will be filmed in Toronto and Houston, Tex.

Currently Bowes is appearing in the Toronto Free Theatre production of Angel City by the American playwright, Sam Shepard. The Toronto Sun's McKenzie Porter describes Bowes as "perhaps the best actor in the company" and showing "compelling, meaningful form . . . The transformation scene in which Bowes becomes a long-haired, long-taloned caricature of Howard Hughes in the tycoon's final madness is chilling."

Toronto Star critic Gina Mallet also has high praise for Bowes, calling him "a really delightful actor." In aother article she selects Bowes as one of the three most consistent actors of quality in Toronto's 1978-79 theatre season.

Gifted with a tremendous sense of humor, Geoffrey Bowes was known for his clowning instincts during schooldays in Victoria, where he first attended Glenlyon.

Most teachers thought he ought to settle down and take life more seriously but one teacher, Gil Bunch, understood the performing instinct, the desire to communicate with an audience and the lively intelligence. He did everything possible to encourage development of the talent he knew was there.

Bowes attended the University of Victoria for two years, unfortunately at a period in the theatre department when the emphasis was not on students getting good acting opportunities. Even so, his interest in theatre was intensified by the experience and he continued his extroverted way through three years of the National Theatre School in Montreal.

Bowes has had a number of stage roles with the Toronto Free Theatre and Factory Theatre Lab, plus a season at Stratford. He has been seen in some television programs, including the CBC series, The Great Detective, and has prominent roles in three films not yet released, Old Fish Hawk, Something Rotten and Self Defence.

The actor's mother, Olga Bowes, resides in Victoria at 4305 Gordon Head. He also has a talented sister, Deborah, teaching dance at the National Ballet School in Toronto.

Lea's fish debate try squelched by Speaker

Prince Rupert NDP MLA Graham Lea was thwarted Thursday in attempting to launch an emergency debate in the house on an international fishing problem brewing in B.C. waters off his riding.

Speaker Harvey Schroeder delayed making a ruling on a request for an emergency debate through both the afternoon and evening sittings.

Lea said sudden changes by the federal government on the fishing agreements with the U.S. will allow U.S. fishermen into the Canadian waters of Dixon Entrance north of Queen Charlotte Islands.

Lea argued B.C. should immediately press the federal government to enforce the international boundary that keeps American boats out of the Canadian section of Dixon Entrance.

The U.S. fishermen are being allowed in because of concessions granted Canadian maritime fishermen on the East coast, Lea said.

He said it's the same thing all over again on the international negotiations. "B.C. is getting the short end of the stick again."

Before the new treaty is finalized, it is dangerous to let U.S. fishermen in Canadian waters because once they have their foot in the door, it will be difficult to get them out again, the Prince Rupert MLA said.

Lea noted emotions run high on the fishing grounds, and there has been violence over similar issues in the past.

On a related matter, the chief negotiator on the U.S. team has died, delaying even further the lengthy negotiations trying to work out new fishing boundaries now that both nations have extended their international boundaries to 200 miles.

Talks with a new U.S. negotiator are expected to start in September, at the end of yet another fishing season.

Jobs tight but Gerald's on track

Gerald checks over race results

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Sandown hired a student during hire-a-student week which is why Gerald Graham is still in Victoria and not on his way to Alberta.

He is part of the film crew at the Sandown Harness Raceway, where he will be employed until fall.

"Maybe after that something permanent will turn up," he said.

Finding employment in Victoria has been far from easy.

"Four of my friends gave up and moved to Alberta to find work. But I'm determined to stay in Victoria if I can."

The key to finding work in Victoria, he said, is to keep on trying and to be flexible about what type of work one is willing to do.

"Getting a job is the essential thing. It could lead to a better one. I hope I will get good references at the end of the racing season."

Born in Thunder Bay, Graham was educated in Toronto. He attended Ryerson College for two years and then got employment as "a very junior technician" in the film department at CBC Toronto.

"I realized I would be nothing more than a technician all my life unless I tried to improve myself so I decided to go to university. I looked at the covers of a number of university calendars and I picked Victoria because it looked the prettiest.

"I'm glad I came and I hope I can stay."

He took two years at UVic, graduating in May with a BA in geography. He is also a fully-qualified teacher.

He checked with the Canada Employment Centre for Students and heard about the Sandown job.

"I had just a little experience with video film but they gave me a chance to show what I could do."

At Sandown he sits in one of the two towers and films each race with a videotape recorder. Another employee is filming simultaneously from the other tower. Both films are fed into a central office in the grandstand where the best angle is selected and the two films are put together as a single record of the race.

Graham finds it exciting work even though the pay is just average. He makes $35 a day, four days a week, which is only $140 but at an hourly rate is something around $6.50.

"It's a perfect summer job and I love it. When the season ends I'm going to have to consider something more permanent. There may be teaching opportunities in the north or I may have to go to Alberta like my friends did.

"But, hopefully, I will find something in Victoria. This summer job may lead to something permanent."

Graham was among 115 students who found jobs through the CEC Student office at 2653 Douglas as of noon Thursday.

Office director Holly Weidner said the jobs included waitresses, sales clerks, car wash, nursing homes, commission sales, switchboard, receptionists, cooks and stock workers.

But there are about 3,000 students still looking for work, so many more jobs must be located, she said. Employers can contact the office at 388-3458 but job-seekers are encouraged to arrive in person and not phone.

Youth attacked by dogs

KELOWNA (CP) — Greg Mercier received 58 stitches in his arms Wednesday night after the 13-year-old youth was savagely attacked by three German shepherd dogs at his home.

The attack occurred when the dogs went after his terrier and the youth tried to stop them.

"It looked like somebody sliced him with a butcher knife when I saw my boy on the table in emergency," said Hugh Mercier, Greg's father.

Two of Greg's friends who were passing by went to his aid and prevented the dogs from causing more wounds.

"If it hadn't been for those boys, God knows what might have happened," said his father. "Police had warned the owners of these dogs on several occasons but nothing was done about it until now.

RCMP said all three dogs had been destroyed.

Greg's pet terrier suffered multiple wounds to the hindquarters, the underside of its belly and one side was ripped open. The dog, named Sparky, was being treated by a veterinarian and was expected to recover.

Anti-drug man fined for lsd

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A member of an organization which helps drug abusers was fined $350 Thursday and placed on probation for a year after he was convicted in provincial court of possessing 134 doses of LSD.

Arthur Frank Smitheram, 30, a member of the Parents' Alert Society in this interior city, was found not guilty of the more serious charge of possession for the purpose of trafficking.

Smitheram was charged after RCMP found nine doses of the drug in the pocket of his jacket and another 125 doses in an open envelope addressed to him when they entered his home April 5.

The defendant said the drug was not his and suggested someone might have planted it. He told the court he had been involved in both selling and use of LSD about 10 years ago but had since stopped.

Grounded fish boat rescued

The 33-metre fish packer Caledonia of New Westminster, with six people aboard, went aground about 1:15 p.m. Thursday at Kennedy Island, 32 kilometres south of Prince Rupert.

The crew suffered no injuries and was taken to Prince Rupert by the Canadian Coast Guard's buoy tender Alexander Mackenzie.

The packer was pulled free by the tug Cindy Mozel, belonging to Rivtow Straits Ltd., and towed to Prince Rupert.

Saanich to study recycle program

Saanich council will be asked to approve expenditure of $5,360 on a comprehensive study of the garbage recycling potential in the municipality and on developing a program to encourage residents to recycle their waste.

Ald. Howard Sturrock, chairman of the recently appointed citizens' task force on recycling, said today the recommendation was adopted at the group's meeting Thursday night.

He said the funds are being requested to pay for the professional services of a Victoria consulting firm, Enertask Consultants Ltd., which presented a detailed submission outlining how it could assist in the task.

The study program drawn up envisages a substantial portion of the work being undertaken by the task force members themselves on an unpaid basis, with the guidance and help of the consultants, Sturrock explained.

Among the objectives will be:

— An assessment of the volume of recyclable materials now committed to waste and the proportion that might be recovered through a recycling program;

— Based on that information, the development of an appropriate system of collection, processing, storage and shipping;

— Studying the compatibility of a recycling program with the Capital Regional District's proposal for an energy-producing garbage incineration plant. ("I happen to think they are compatible," Sturrock said).

The Art Gallery is reaching out for those who mistakenly think it is a luxury place only for the city's elite . . . director Roger Boulet says the collections are for 'old, young, rich and poor'

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Ceramic trout, a sculpture by Neil Dalrymple, draws young gallery visitor Monica L'Esperance

The gallery invites you

Photos by Bill Halkett and John McKay

The Art Gallery of Greater Victoria? They show a lot of this modern stuff, don't they?

No, I don't go there. I figure it's for the fat cats in our society.

Yes, I go quite often. Some of it's great but some things I can't stand.

It's a luxury; nice but not necessary.

I don't know anything about art. Where is it anyway?

If we can't afford proper hospital care we can't afford an art gallery.

Those were some of the more negative answers during a random posing of the question: How do you feel about the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria? Do you go there sometimes?

There were a lot of answers that ranged from favorable to enthusiastic. But what is of concern at this point is not the committed — the gallery has a dedicated membership of 2,300 including 90 corporate members. It's the uncommitted the gallery staff would like to reach out to and bring within its orbit.

What Director Roger Boulet and his staff — Robert Amos, assistant director, Margaret Bell, curator of decorative arts, Willard Holmes, curator of contemporary art — are specially interested in is the introduction of the gallery to more people as a resource place, a graphic history of man's creativity, a rich supplement to the educational process.

Or quite simply, a happy and inspiring place to spend an hour or so.

"Too often people come into a gallery subconsciously looking for what they don't like," says Boulet. "And of course they find it in some room, because no gallery worth its salt can show only one kind or one period of art.

"But what many people don't like, such as contemporary art for instance, is always balanced by showings of traditional and historical works of some kind."

The value of a well-managed gallery and art museum such as this one at 1040 Moss, a peaceful area on the city's perimeter, is quite apart from any controversy and pleasures that might arise from temporary exhibitions. It lies principally in the fact that it is a gathering place for what is beautiful and permanent out of our past and vital in reflecting our present.

There is these days a great surge toward protecting heritage places. But only the environment and expertise associated with an art museum like the gallery here can protect some of the most irreplaceable aspects of our heritage.

Excellence of the gallery, which is owned and operated by a society, not by the city, led to its being appointed one of a few associate museums under the National Museums Corporation of Canada.

Gifts from art collectors have flowed to the gallery in an ever-increasing stream. More and more attention is being paid to it by mainland collectors who demonstrate a preference for it above any other B.C. gallery.

In the last year alone, according to Director Emeritus Colin Graham, an estimated $350,000 worth of great art works have been received, including a large A.Y. Jackson painting and the Anne Pearson collection of 18th century English porcelains and furniture.

Is this place a luxury we can't afford? Is it a place for the rich elite?

On the contrary, it is a place we cannot afford to ignore, that should be an extreme object of civic pride as the repository of great collections held in public trust.

And despite being consistently under-financed, "there is no way we want to raise admission prices (from the current 50-cent adult 25-cent student rate)" says Boulet. "The collections are for everybody, old and young, rich and poor.

"We are fortunate that the federal government looks so well on us," he says. "The total federal contribution to this gallery since 1973 has been 48.5 per cent of our operating budget, the highest of any private gallery in Canada. The influx of federal funds is based on our demonstrated will to make our collections accessible to all in the Victoria area, in the province and in Canada."

Boulet compares the large federal contribution to the province's 19 per cent and the municipalities' 8.5 per cent — an entirely inappropriate division he feels, considering the gallery's major services are provided to the people of Greater Victoria and the province.

"The proportions of financial support have not gone unnoticed," he says.

A recent letter from the National Museums suggests that substantial core-funding grants might cease if the level of non-federal support does not increase substantially. It's significant that for the first time a condition is made that 25 per cent of the 1979-80 grant of $90,000 must be spent on out-of-province activities."

In the last five years, the National Museums of Canada has contributed $1.2 million, the province $618,000, Canada Council $351,000 and the Victoria Intermunicipal Committee $340,000. Out of the latter, $85,000 was returned to the city in taxes.

The gallery's total operating budget for 1979-80 is $472,430. It's interesting to note that in Saskatoon, a city roughly the same size as Victoria, the gallery has a total operating budget of $579,000 to which the municipal contribution is a handsome 61.4 per cent.

"When the provincial government can boast of a predicted surplus of $145 million and an accumulated lotteries fund of $19 million, supposedly for recreational and cultural activities, it is not a presumption to suggest that provincial support to museums and art galleries in this province be increased," says Boulet.

"It is only then that museum collections can become more fully accessible to the public, both physically and intellectually."

As a purchasing fund for the Victoria gallery has been virtually non-existent throughout its history, the gallery is deeply beholden to the various private collectors who have favored it with constant and generous gifts. For instance, Isabel Pollard for the superb Asian collection and the recent unparalleled acquisition of the Pearson porcelains.

Much early B.C. art is being lost to places outside the province, says Boulet.

"We ought to be able to mount a show illustrating the development of Canadian art for school children without having to borrow extensively. We have no Krieghoff and no Lawren Harris, for example."

Considerable attention is paid to serving schools, hospitals, the handicapped with all parts of the gallery accessible to wheelchairs.

One of the volunteer groups, the docents, assists in these programs. The docents are a group of women who attend lectures given by staff members and are on call to provide guided tours whenever needed.

School children and their teachers are enthusiastic explorers of the gallery but are inhibited by lack of funds for busing. For transportation to museums (as well as salmon runs), School District 61 provides only $1,200 spread over 60 schools, which amounts to about six cents per student.

Visually educated children are more aware of environment and quality of life than those who are deprived in this way, Boulet says.

"No one needs a fantastic amount of specialized education to go into an art gallery and gain measurably from the experience," says Boulet.

Children screaming - caretaker

An apartment block caretaker and his wife discovered the strangled body of a 26-year-old tenant in her bedroom after returning from a car trip to Nanaimo, a B.C. Supreme Court jury was told Wednesday.

When Robert Burke and his wife, Jane, who now live in Toronto, returned about 4:30 p.m. May 14, 1978, to the Queens Avenue apartment they were met in the parking lot by the two children of Janice Forbes.

The children looked upset and all four went to the mother's suite and Burke opened the door with his master key.

He said the children and his wife were screaming and he saw the mother lying face-down between the bed and wall with her hands tied behind her back and one leg tied behind her to her neck with a cord about 12 inches long.

The children were taken to the Burke suite where they spent the night.

Burke and his wife were testifying in the fourth day of the trial of Tommy Ross Jr. of Los Angeles, accused of first-degree murder in the death of Forbes.

Burke said he and his wife had planned to go to Nanaimo. The building elevator had broken down and he saw Forbes about 11 or 11:30 a.m. just before leaving to give her a key to let the elevator repairman in. The door to her suite was closed but unlocked.

He said she seemed normal, "just herself."

The next day, he said the children showed him a drawing they had made on an exit door which he identified in a photograph in court. It showed the profile of a person with a peaked cap and thick lips.

He also said jimmy marks on the door jamb of the woman's suite were from an earlier burglary and there were jimmy marks at two other suites.

In cross-examination, he said he had seen the woman's arms at least once and saw what he observed to be needle marks. (Pathologist Dr. John Marsden said earlier he didn't identify any needle marks on the woman but there were bruises on the arm.)

Burke said Forbes showed him her arm while they were walking on Queens Avenue to Central Park two or three weeks earlier.

"She just showed me. I didn't ask," he said.

There were two large bruises on her forearm. Shown a photograph taken after her death of bruises on the inside of her right arm, he said they appeared much smaller than the ones he had seen which he described as quite large with a lot of discoloring.

He said he was not pleased that his wife associated with Forbes.

"I didn't much approve of the use of drugs and she (Forbes) appeared quite proud of it."

He had seen marijuana plants on the balcony of Forbes suite and he did not approve of his wife smoking marijuana and that was another reason he didn't like his wife associating with her.

Mrs. Burke said she and her husband were ready to leave for Nanaimo about 11:30 a.m. and they went to Forbes' suite to leave the keys for the elevator repairman. Forbes was preparing to do her laundry.

She didn't think they were there longer than 15 minutes and Forbes went to the laundry room and her husband spent not longer than 20 minutes fixing the car. Forbes' two children were riding their bicycles in the parking lot. She and her husband left for Nanaimo just before 12:30 p.m.

She said Forbes looked upset when the keys were dropped off, perhaps not as happy as she usually was. In response to later questions, she said Forbes did not seem too pleased with the person she was talking to on the phone when they first entered the suite and seemed sad or disappointed, "she appeared down."

She saw Forbes five or six times a week and they had gone out socially. She had seen a small green transparent glass teapot on the dining room window sill which was usually half full of coins.

The last time she saw the teapot was May 13.

Shown a green glass teapot introduced earlier as an exhibit, she said that was probably the teapot.

(The teapot, police said, had the right thumb print of Ross on it. Police said it was found June 10 on a dresser in the bedroom but apparently not noticed before.)

She said the children said something about the drawing on the exit door when she and Robert arrived back from Nanaimo and before police arrived but it was three or four days later that she saw it.

She said she had seen Forbes snort cocaine once, had seen her get a couple of joints from a sister and that she herself had smoked with her.

Before the judge

A former security guard was jailed for nine months Thursday after pleading guilty in provincial court to passing bad cheques.

Frederick Scholefied, 22, of no fixed address, passed the cheques at area branches of a food chain between April 25 and May 26. More than $500 was involved.

He was ordered to make restitution to the best of his ability when released. In addition, he was fined $5 on each of two driving offences to which he had pleaded guilty.

He had no previous convictions.

Crown prosecutor Don Laughton reminded Judge Harold Alder of the prevalence of this type of offence which he said "seems to be on the increase in the community."

A 25-year-old Victoria man who went to jail for 20 days in 1976 for driving while suspended pleaded guilty to the same offence and was sentenced to 30 days.

George Death, 55 Bay, was also sentenced to 14 days concurrent for impaired driving.

The court was told Death was checked in the parking lot of a Sidney hotel in the early morning of May 19 and ordered to take a breathalyser test after he failed physical tests. He had two readings of .14.

When asked by the judge what justification he had for driving while disqualified on the basis of his record, Death said: "There isn't one."

Others pleading guilty to drinking-driving offences and fined $400 were: Douglas Opheim, 24, of 860 Carey; Wayne Tiffin, 20, of 515 Foster; John Currier, 38, of 2440 Sooke; John Herlihy, 25, of 3130 Wishart; Randy Brighton, 20, of 115 Gorge Road East.

A Quebec student here for the summer as a camp counsellor was told by Alder he could use a little counselling himself.

Steven Vallee, 18, of Thetford Mines, pleaded guilty to the theft of a hat and shorts from a downtown department store Wednesday afternoon, and was fined $125.

A 19-year-old who told the judge he had made positive changes in his life since being charged last January with fraudulently obtaining food was given a suspended sentence plus three months probation.

Gavin Wood, 19, of 853 Selkirk, had pleaded guilty and was making restitution to the owner of a downtown pizzeria.

ICBC to sue

likely the changes were lost in the attendant coverage.

McCarthy also said the changes were approved before her appointment to the ICBC board of directors.

The move is a radical departure from the original policy where ICBC paid for injury awards made in civil actions to innocent victims without going after the guilty party to recover the award.

In the past, ICBC would sue for recovery only if the driver was involed in a police chase as a result of criminal activities or was involved in a criminal activity.

Critics of the change in regulations passed by cabinet earlier this year are not so much opposed to the change as they are upset by the fact it was done so quietly.

Lawyer Stu Leggatt (NDP—Coquitlam-Port Moody) said that while the changes are probably good, he is surprised the government would make the changes involving such tremendous responsibilities for all drivers "without shouting them from the rooftops in warning."

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said he was surprised to learn there was little publicity surrounding the move.

"Every driver who takes a drink, then drives, should be aware of the tremendous financial responsibility he faces if he injures an innocent person," Gardom said.

Vancouver lawyer Walley Lightbody revealed the changes with an article in the April-May issue of Advocate — a professional publication for lawyers.

"It is of critical importance that lawyers practising in the field of criminal law and civil litigation related to motor vehicle accidents be intimately familiar with this far reaching legislation," Lightbody wrote.

Lightbody said the government has been remiss in not making the changes widely known.

Crash plane

mid-flight. They felt the wing separation was probably due to corrosion which weakened the plane's carry-through wing attachment assembly.

They noted inconsistencies in relation to the original aircraft log and the reports kept by the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration which had a record of the previous crash.

Coroner Ken Tasker said in his summary that a declaration concerning the aircraft's airworthiness had been falsified "either knowingly or unknowingly."

Staron president Keith (Smokey) Johnson testified at the inquest he had purchased the aircraft and had it reassembled in October, 1976.

The plane was deemed airworthy on Jan. 6, 1977.

Fred May, co-owner of Tradewinds Aviation said in an interview that Staron engineer Tom Coulter had inspected the plane before it was brought to Canada.

He said Tradewinds operated the plane under lease from Staron for several months before the crash.

The plane's log mentioned only a minor damage history, he said.

He was unaware of the previous major accident.

When he saw the photographs of the first crash, he said he was shocked.

"It nearly blew my mind. The damned thing was a wreck."

Whether the engineer Coulter was aware of the extent of the damage done in the first crash will never be known. He was killed in a plane crash early in the summer of 1978.

The MOT spokesman said the airworthiness certificate and logbook are supposed to provide the complete history of the plane.

However, he said the investigator's report on the tragic Helio flight will likely contain a recommendation urging anyone who buys a plane outside the country to look more deeply into the plane's history and not rely solely on the certificate of airworthiness.

fore in Canada. He cited the $197 million raised by Bell Canada earlier this year as an example.

The company was incorporated by the Social Credit government in February, 1978, with holdings which included interests in Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., Kootenay Forest Products Ltd., Plateau Mills Ltd., Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. and oil and gas exploration rights.

Many of the companies had been converted into Crown corporations by the former NDP government.

The book value of $6.75 a share was reached by adding the number of purchased shares (almost 70 million) with the government's issuance of 15 million shares (12 million for the giveaway), then dividing the total of 85 million shares into the assets of about $565 million.

TOWN TALK

While the price of gas in B.C. has risen an average of 53 per cent in the past five years, a survey undertaken by the B.C. Automobile Association shows motorists are still getting a relatively good deal.

The provincial average of 21.5 cents a litre is below that of the U.S. — 24.3 cents — and well down from most other nations in the world.

In France, for instance, a litre costs 74 cents, in Belgium 64 cents, the Netherlands and Switzerland 62 cents, Japan 61 cents, England 45 cents and Austria 40 cents.

On the other hand, motorists in Mexico pay only 14 cents.

The survey pointed out gas prices have increased in B.C. only three per cent in the past five months while they've shot up 16.5 per cent in the U.S.

Prince George has the highest average gas prices in the province at 22.7 cents. Chilliwack offers the best deal with an average litre price of 20.8 cents. In Greater Vancouver the average is 21 cents; in Victoria 21.3 cents.

All prices are quoted in Canadian currency and are for regular gas.

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory returned from Europe this week convinced Victoria's traffic conditions are cinchy compared to European cities, such as Rome.

One of the hats Gregory wears is that of president of the Victoria Rotary Club and he told his fellow Rotarians on Thursday that Roman taxi drivers have to be the worst in the world.

The only pedestrians in Rome he quipped "are the quick and the dead."

JOLI
. . . dope runner

Well, wonder no more.

The Joli, which won its division in the 1976 Swiftsure and until two years ago held the record for fastest time on the Victoria to Maui Trans Pacific race, is now the property of the U.S. government.

The 61-foot sloop was seized by the U.S. Coast Guard and customs following a 37-ton marijuana bust on the freighter Helena Star off Cape Flattery on April 17, 1978.

Investigators said the Joli was being used as a runner vessel bringing the marijuana in to a shore base when the operation was interrupted by the arrival of the Coast Guard.

More than $2 million had been spent in the operation and included the purchase of prime waterfront property at Sequim, a tug, barge, and numerous other smaller vessels besides the Joli.

Well-known Victoria sailing photographer Jim McVie says that notwithstanding the notoriety the Joli has received, the vessel's loss has been a blow to racing.

"It's a crime it's left the racing scene," he says.

In a story Friday to kick off the Times' Walk of the Week series we mentioned that a must for a regular hiker is a talking stick.

A talking stick differs from a walking stick in that it's bigger, more like a Boy Scout staff in size, and is usually quite a bit sturdier.

Talking sticks — the name was given to them by native Indians — used to feature fancy carvings and the like.

However, for Walk of the Week purposes, any shoulder-high wooden staff will do nicely.

Victoria Shriner Roy Comrie was singled out for special mention the other day for the part he played in getting a Nanaimo boy promptly to the Shriner's burn treatment centre in Galveston, Tex., in April.

The boy, 10-year-old Trevor Zado, has returned home after treatment for second and third-degree burns received when he threw lawnmower gasoline on a fire and flames set his nylon jacket ablaze.

He was first brought to the intensive care burn unit at Victoria General Hospital, then the Victoria and Nanaimo Shrine Clubs arranged to get Trevor on a plane to Texas.

Thanks to Capt. Dick Okros, chief of staff readiness, maritime command Pacific, the ancient Anglican church at the Haida Indian village in Masset in the Queen Charlotte Islands has its stained glass window above the altar restored to its original splendor.

A couple of years ago Okros was in Masset to inspect a sea cadet corps. Having some time to spare, he was given a tour of the village by Rev. John Mackenzie, minister of St. John the Evangelist Church.

The window was in pieces, having been destroyed by vandals.

Okros promised to get it restored but it was too complicated a job for CFB Esquimalt.

Instead, ships' crews and shore personnel collected $1,200 between them and M. C. Nuttgens of Cobble Hill restored the window to its original beauty.

The window, originally installed in 1890, marks the conversion to Christianity of Chief Stielta, the first Haida chief to become a Christian.

Werner won't bow to Queen

A Victoria man who can't become a Canadian citizen because he won't swear allegiance to Queen Elizabeth is glad his story is generating a lot of publicity.

Werner Willi Heib has been talking to newspapers, television and radio reporters from as far away as Toronto since a recent federal court ruling that the oath is a requirement of the Citizenship Act.

It's time the "archaic" act is changed, according to the 39 year-old machinist who lives at 3165 Pearkes.

Swearing loyalty to the Queen of England should not be a requirement for becoming a Canadian, Heib said today.

"But that seems to be the most important question. It doesn't matter if you're honest or hardworking."

Heib, who moved here from West Germany 18 years ago, said he will never swear to something he doesn't believe.

Standing up for his principles has cost Heib the right to vote and excludes him from a number of jobs, including government employment.

He is surprised the issue is getting so much attention and hopes his story will encourage other people to speak up.

Many people who take the oath do so against their personal beliefs because the sacrifice is too great if they refuse, Heib said.

He said he has a good job and will continue to stick to his beliefs as long as his famity is not suffering.

His application for citizenship last year was turned down because he balked when asked to repeat the oath of alligiance.

"It would have been a lie."

Warning given motorists going south

If you are going by car to Seattle or thereabouts this weekend, you may have trouble getting gas on Sunday and any time after noon on Saturday.

A spokesman for the American Automobile Association in Seattle said today most gas stations along Highway 5, in Seattle and Everett will be closed Sunday.

In Bellingham, half will close at 3 p.m.

On Saturday, 70 per cent of the Everett area stations will close at 10 a.m., 77 per cent of the Seattle stations at noon and most of the Bellingham gas stations by 5:30 p.m.

The AAA spokesman said the figures are general and may not cover all stations along the highway between the major centres.

She said the closure situation is getting to be typical for the weekend.

Dash 7 planes on way

West Coast Air Holdings Ltd. of Vancouver has ordered three Dash 7 STOL planes and hopes to have at least one operating in B.C. within a year.

The short-takeoff-and-landing craft would be used on routes from Vancouver airport to various B.C. locations — including Victoria once a landing site is found.

President Lynn C. Thow said it might be several years before STOL craft operate on the Victoria-Vancouver route.

"We expect to go ahead soon on several of our routes but we will have to wait until the question of a landing strip is settled before we could operate into Victoria with STOL craft."

The company owns West Coast Air Services Ltd., which operates routes from Vancouver to Victoria, Bella Bella, Powell River plus various charter routes.

Thow said his company has applied to the air transport committee for permission to use the STOL planes on several of the routes.

The Dash 7s are manufactured by De Havilland at a price of about $5.5 million each.

One plane is due for delivery in 1980 and all three are to be delivered by 1982.

Thow said the STOL planes are ideal for remote areas where only small landing strips can be constructed.

Vancouver airport would continue to be the landing area for the Lower Mainland.

In Victoria the company has studied several possible sites for a landing strip, including the Work Point area but no decision has been made.

"We are waiting for Victoria to decide if and where they want a STOL landing strip. We are available to offer STOL service if Victoria wants it."

Tommy's gold pass real clinker

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

After 50 years at the Empress Hotel, Tommy Johnson was looking forward to retirement.

One of the nice things he anticipated was the gold pass CP Rail handed out to employees after a half century of service.

Johnson knows of only two others in Canada who have the pass, which used to entitle the bearer and family to unlimited free CP Rail travel.

He was given the pass and a gold watch amid farewell speeches at a party in the hotel May 1.

Several days later he found out the special pass, along with all other passes to retired CP hotel employees, would be discontinued June 15.

"Why did they make such a big to-do about giving me this pass if they knew it was no good?" Johnson asks.

He said he is not blaming the hotel, but he is mad at CP Rail for ruining his plans to visit relatives across Canada.

Members of the Retired Employees Association of Canadian Pacific Services on Vancouver Island also are angry with CP Rail, which owns shipping, rail and truck lines and a hotel chain.

President Barry Parsons said pass privileges were withdrawn from all but railway employees, effective June 15.

The cancellation is a tremendous blow because the passes are the only chance many pensioners have to travel.

Pensioners have earned the privileges after 20 or 30 years service and withdrawing them is pretty shabby treatment, he feels.

"In the last years of their lives they hoped to be able to visit their families."

Parsons has written protest letters to CP Rail headquarters in Montreal, the railway workers union, Esquimalt-Saanich MP Don Munro and Defence Minister Allan McKinnon, the MP for Victoria.

So far he's received sympathy from the MPs and no response from CP Rail.

And Johnson, who made plans with his wife to take an extended trip to Quebec, Toronto and Halifax, doesn't know what he will do now.

He still wants to travel by train, even if he has to pay for the trip, but faces a dilemma.

A downtown train station for Victoria came a step closer to reality Thursday when representatives from VIA Rail Canada Inc. endorsed the proposal.

Ald. Murray Glazier said today he spent the afternoon with Roger Spack, VIA's project manager for development from Montreal and Al Hammond, transportation manager from Winnipeg.

He said the two men met with regional district and city hall officials and indicated they were completely in support of a plan to move the Esquimalt and Nanaimo rail terminus to the city side of the Johnson Street bridge.

Glazier has been promoting the scheme that would see a new station built on Store at the intersection of Johonson.

The E&N now terminates its passenger runs at the station in Esquimalt.

"I was very pleased with the meeting," said Glazier. "It produced much more than expected . . . they said if the station was downtown now they'd start operating out of it tomorrow."

Glazier said there'd been some concern that VIA might not support the plan because traffic across the bridge is halted when the lift span is raised to allow vessels to pass.

But he said that problem can been overcome simply by co-ordinating marine traffic so that it doesn't pass the bridge at the times trains are due in and out.

Glazier said that because of VIA's endorsement the city will now work out details of the station, and after that begin to negotiate a cost sharing arangement for the project.

The provincial government, VIA and the city are all expected to share in the expenses.

MUSSELS OPEN HOME STAND AGAINST BELLINGHAM TONIGHT

The young fella? He's the manager

BELLINGHAM — Who says you have to be a grizzled veteran to manage in professional baseball?

Seattle Mariners have entrusted their rookie-laden Northwest League farm team in Bellingham to a man barely older than the players he'll manage.

No, he's not the nephew of Danny Kaye.

But he may be more qualified for the post than many of the ex-major leaguers who got their minor league jobs as a reward for services rendered in the majors.

Although he's only 24, making him the youngest manager in professional baseball, Jeff Scott has seven years experience in the minor leagues, four as a player and three as a coach.

He began his professional baseball career as a 17-year-old and spent four years as a pitcher in the Texas Rangers' organization.

"After my second season, I developed a sore arm," said Scott, whose club defeated Victoria Mussels 4-1 Thursday night in their first series of the new season.

"I pitched a couple more years with an arm that was a little shaky until I was at the point where I wasn't doing myself any good. Then Texas gave me my release.

"I had just turned 21 and a couple of weeks later they called me and asked if I wanted to coach. They needed a pitching coach at their class A club in Asheville, N.C. I was going to school during the winter and I didn't have anything else planned so I took it and it worked out pretty well.

"I was there in 1976, '77, '78 and this year until I left to come out here."

It was while playing and coaching for the Rangers' organization that Scott met Hal Keller, then farm director and now the director of player development for the Mariners.

Keller fostered Scott's career from the beginning. Keller oversaw Scott's signing as a player, gave him the coaching job at Asheville and gave him his first managing posiition.

Scott is aware of the pitfalls that might be before him.

"I've ony been associated with one rookie league team and that was the one I played on," he said. "It wasn't a bad experience but we had 45 ballplayers and it was tough.

"I think you've got to teach more at this level than at the AA or AAA or even A ball levels where they've been playing a year or so. And you've got to baby a few of them.

"You've got to try and instill in their minds how the organization likes the game to be played as far as the fundamentals of the cutoff plays, relays, bunts and pickoffs are concerned. I know as long as Darrell Johnson is manager (of the Mariners) he's going to have his own way of doing things and I think they'd want everybody from the bottom up to start learning that."

The young manager takes his Bellingham squad into Victoria's Royal Athletic Park tonight for Mussels' home opener, starting at 7:30. Mussels have designated Roy Moretti to start against the Mariners.

In Bellingham, the Mariners used Ramon Esteppa's home run and eight innings of shutout ball to defeat Victoria Thursday.

The Mariners took a 2-1 lead in the first inning on an RBI single by Roy Clark and an error by the Victoria shortsop. Another run scored on a wild pitch in the fourth, the same inning as Esteppa's homer.

Aussie quickly forgets first Open appearance

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Jack Newton had some unhappy memories about the Canadian Open golf championship, but they were quickly forgotten Thursday.

The quiet-spoken Australian tore apart Glen Abbey's image of toughness with a 64 — three strokes better than the previous best round since the $350,000 tournament was moved here permanently in 1977.

While he says he enjoys tough courses, the 29-year-old Newton had little opportunity to test its vastness last year. One of his playing partners in the opening round reported to PGA officials that Newton's caddy helped him line his putt on the first green on opening day and he was disqualified.

Newton, lightly-regarded since he has collected slightly more than $27,000 on the tour this year and standing 80th overall among money-winners, admitted he was peeved about the circumstances of a year ago.

His caddy, he said, was the son of a PGA vice-president and a friend who was standing on line with his putt and the hole, "but he was 25 feet from me; I didn't even know he was there."

Newton's round Thursday — seven shots under par — was two shots better than Tom Watson's, top earner on tour this year with $353,874.

Another shot back at four-under-par 67 ware Fuzzy Zoeller, Johnny Miller and Lee Trevino, who won the Canadian Open here in 1977 and in 1971 at Richelieu Valley in Montreal.

Over-all, 23 players bettered par-71, including a 70 by Gary Cowan, top amateur and Canadian.

Watson, who has won four tournaments this year and finished in the top five of four others, agreed that the course "was set up pretty easy."

Tour regular Jim Nelford of Burnaby and Herb Holzscheiter of Toronto were at 71 with Bruce Lietzke and a group that included tour veterans Charles Coody, John Schroeder, Bobby Wadkins and Ed Sneed.

Dave Barr of Kelowna and Dan Halldorson of Shilo, Man., two other regulars on the PGA tour this season, were at 73 — two over par — along with Arnold Palmer, Fay Floyd, Mike Hill and Forrest Fezler.

Two Victoria hopefuls were well back. Southpaw pro Bob Beauchemin came in with a 78 while amateur Dave Mick had a disappointing 85, which, he said, "was probably the worst round I've played in five years."

The low 70 and ties after today's round survive the halfway cut. All four rounds of the tournament are being carried by CBC television, starting at 12 noon.

Yakubowich back to try luck in Pan-Am trials

Times News Services

The controversial Pan-American Games track trials which begin tonight in Vancouver have been graced by entries from veteran international campaigners Penny Bales of Ottawa and Joyce Yakubowich of Victoria.

Bales and Yakubowich are in a field of 169 runners at the trials which will be held on an artificial surface track at Empire Stadium that is rated fast by Gerard Mach, national program director for the Canadian Track and Field Association and head coach for the track and field team for the Pan-Am Games.

Bales, better known as Penny Werthner before she was married, has been training in France and didn't enter the 800-metre and 1,500-metre events until late Wednesday night.

Yakubowich, winner of two gold medals at the 1975 Pan-Am Games in Mexico City in the women's 400 metres, hasn't run competitively for three years, but began training again early this year in Richmond. Yakubowich will run in the 200 and 400 in the trials.

She also ran a strong anchor leg for Canada's winning relay team in the 4x400 event four years ago.

A cloud of uncertainty has hung over the track trials because of a preliminary list the track and field association has already submitted to the Canadian Olympic Association, which in turn has passed the names on to Games officials in Puerto Rico. The Pan-Am competitions begin July 1.

Mach will oversee the 14 events here and fly to Toronto for a meeting with the Olympic association early Sunday morning, at which time the track and field group may suggest changes to the track and field team.

Mach said Thursday that the preliminary list was presented based on performances since May 1, 1978. He said that outstanding times here would be taken into consideration regarding possible changes in the Canadian team.

He also said that the track and field association has had some difficulty in making decisions on the Pan-Am team because some Canadian athletes have geared their training programs so that they will peak for the prestigious World Cup competition in Montreal in late August.

"This is a difficult position for us to be in because there are two important events in one year leading up to the 1980 Olympics," said Mach.

Bales' late entry was somewhat of a surprise to meet organizers, who project close races tonight in the women's 1,500 and Saturday in the 800.

Expected to challenge Bales in the 1,500 are Debbie Scott of Victoria, Britt McRoberts of Richmond and Francine Grendron of Montreal.

The 800 Saturday also will feature Debbie Campbell of Victoria, Gendron, Scott, Yvonne Saunders of Guelph, Ont., Anne Mackie-Morelli of Richmond, Ranza Clark of Calgary and McRoberts.

Yakubowich will face a strong field tonight in the women's 400, including Saunders, Campbell, Clark and Mackie-Morelli. She also will be strongly challenged Saturday in the 200 by Angela Taylor of Toronto, considered Canada's best women's sprinter this year.

Finals tonight include the men's 400, 1,500, 100, 10,000 and 3,000 steeplechase, along with the women's 400, 1,500 and 100.

Four competitors will be in Victoria on Saturday for the men's Pan-Am hammer throw trials, including Canadian record-holder Scott Nielson of New Westminster, a pre-med student at the University of Washington. The hammer competition will highlight the annual Y-Times strack meet at Centennial Stadium.

Meanwhile, in Toronto, Bruce Simpson of Toronto broke his own Canadian record in the pole vault Thursday by clearing 5.32 metres in a qualifying meet.

Simpson, whose former mark was 5.30, easily bettered the Pan Am standard of 5.25 on the opening day of the two-day meet at Etobicoke Centennial Stadium, which offers a last chance for competitors in field events to qualify for the Canadian team.

Best not available, Vistas call it a day

The Vancouver Island Soccer League is withdrawing its entry, the Vistas, from the Pacific Northwest Soccer League.

Vistas have had up to 24 different players in their lineup in the three league games to date because of three overlapping summer soccer programs.

Vistas manager Dave Unwin said Thursday it was "not in the best interest of soccer to support a program that does not include the best talent from the league."

"We have players with the national youth team, the World Student Games team and the B.C. entry in the Western Canada Games . . . so we're taking a break."

Vistas, 1-2 this season, won the inaugural PNSL championship last season.

NBA trying out three-point goal

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Is the three-point goal a gimmick whose only purpose is to capture the fans' fancy or is it a sound refinement in the way the game of basketball is played?

The National Basketball Association hopes to find out next season, when it will give the controversial rule a one-year trial run.

The NBA's board of governors voted to adopt the three-point goal on an experimental basis at the opening session of its annual summer meetings Thursday following a debate that commissioner Larry O'Brien described as spirited.

"It was the NBA traditionalists debating those who have experienced the three-point goal, particularly in the American Basketball Association," said O'Brein. "It finally passed by a very close vote, so close that one straw could have turned it the other way."

Under the rule, which is similar to that used by the ABA, three points will be awarded for any shot made from beyond a designated perimeter of the floor ranging from 22 feet to 23 feet, 9 inches.

In another major move, the governors voted to go back to two-man refereeing teams after trying a three-referee system for one year. Although the NBA coaches and general managers and the league's rules and competitions committee all voted in favor of keeping the extra official, the owners turned it down, primarily for financial reasons.

Sooke-Pedder Bay area still producing lunkers

Wind kept a lot of fishermen close to hearth and home during the past week but those who managed to get out had better-than-average success at a number of spots around Vancouver Island.

Secretary Island waters are yielding some excellent catches in terms of size — but not in any great numbers.

Ken Moyes took the top catch of the week with a 37½-pounder landed Sunday on strip. Two other salmon in his catch tipped the scales at 13 and 10½ pounds.

John Fredericks boated two weighing 35 and 20 pounds on anchovies Monday and Bill Shvetz came in Tuesday with a 36-pounder taken on an anchovy.

Fishermen working out of Becher Bay continued to connect with some heavy chinooks this week.

John Reimer of Kelowna weighed a 41-pounder and two 15s in on Tuesday after trolling with anchovies off Beechey Head and John Nybeck boated three — 37, 28 and 18 — earlier this week in the same general vicinity.

Best results have been on strip, minnow or anchovies trolled at about the 30-foot depth near the Head and off the Trap Shack.

Alf Bryan topped the catch with a 37-pounder taken on a minnow Sunday off Christopher Point and Victor Prior managed to hit a matched double-header of two 31-pounders Saturday off Church Island.

Other good catches have come in from Race Pass with bait producing most consistently.

Fishing off the Victoria waterfront has remained good with Jack Barker landing two weighing 26¾ and 22 pounds on herring Saturday off Albert Head. Other good catches have come from Brotchie Ledge.

Chinooks in the low teens are coming in from Trial Island off Oak Bay but wind has cause problems the early part of this week.

Two 17½ pound chinooks — one taken by Steve Roberts off Sidney Spit and the other boated by Murray Kosick off Coal Island — relieve an otherwise bleak return at Sidney.

Deep Cove is yielding some good catches and coho to five pounds are showing off Coles Bay, Willis Point and McKenzie Bay. Most were taken on downriggers and hootchies.

Action picked up in the middle part of the week in Finlayson Arm. Gordon Dalziel landed two nice chinooks (21 and 11) while trolling a Squirt on Thursday morning off Chesterfield Rock. Other good spots have been Misery Bay and Goldstream Island with some new boat owners — who did't know the rule about fishing extremely deep in this area — managing to outfish the oldtimers.

Further up-Island, Bold Bluff, Sansum Narrows and Mill Bay waters are producing chinooks to the mid-20s on mooching gear and Active Pass has been an off-and-on proposition.

Nanaimo fishermen continue to experience fantastic success for coho to five pounds, mainly between Snake Island and Entrance Light. Try using up to eight ounces of weight and a yellow-and-white Action Flashtail or small strip on trolling gear. Small Stingsildas worked with strip-casting equipment have also produced well.

Deep Bay (150 feet in depth) and Lantzville waters are also rated hot.

Coho to five pounds and a few chinooks to 14 are grabbing spoons and bucktails off Little River and Comox and limits of the same type of salmon are coming from Baker's Pass, Grant's Reef and Willoughby Shoals off Campbell River. Anything fished close to the surface is working.

Trout anglers continue to pick up some good catches of both browns and rainbows in the top end of the Cowichan River using Tom Thumb or Muddler Minnow flies.

Lake fishermen are connecting in Bear, Cowichan, Shawnigan, Divers, Second, Comox, Horne, Sproat, Great Central and Sarita.

Scholarship pitch shot down

CALGARY (CP) — The Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union rejected a proposal Thursday that athletic scholarships be allowed in universities.

At its annual meeting, which concluded Thursday, the CIAU defended the standard four-year eligibility rule across the country and the grant-in-aid program, dismissing the possibility of Canadian athletes receiving financial support as early as the 1980-81 season.

However, the CIAU agreed that, beginning Sept. 1, 1980, any athlete transfering from one CIAU school to another must sit out a year of competition. Also, all athletes must play their fourth and fifth years of eligibility at the same school.

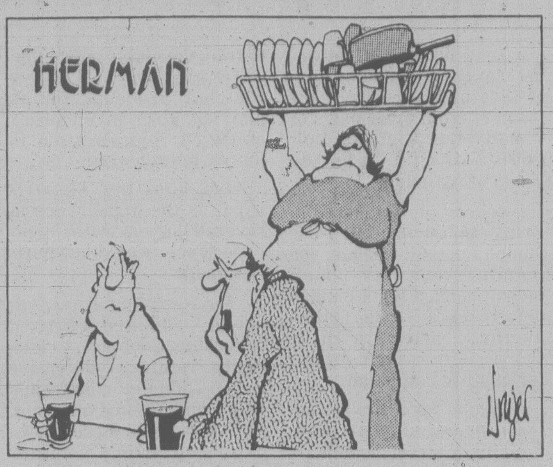
"The transfer rule will cut down on the gypsy players who jump all over looking for the best teams," said Gary Howard, University of Calgary men's basketball coach. "This way a player will have to consider his school carefully and the school will have to sell itself better."

Dennis Kadatz, University of Calgary athletic director, said the CIAU "is sticking its head in the sand" by not endorsing his motion allowing athletes to receive free tuition costs and school fees.

"There are all sorts of financial awards being given out right now by schools all over the country," Kadatz said. "Just check any school's calendar and you'll see them. But the CIAU would rather ignore it all."

Bob Pugh, CIAU executive vice-president, said future scholarship proposals might have better success if they were more specific.

Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, not a member of the CIAU, is the only Canadian university which allows athletic scholarships.



"I told her, the day I do the dishes is the day the sky falls in."

'Bellies cut loose

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies scored 10 consecutive goals in the second period to erase a 3-1 deficit and went on to thump Nanaimo Timbermen 17-6 in a Western Lacrosse Association game Thursday.

The Timbermen, in last place in the five-team league, led 2-1 after one period and scored the first goal of the second frame, before the roof fell in.

Derek Dickson scored four goals to lead the league-leading Salmonbellies. Bob Tasker, Brian Tasker and Jack Fulton each scored twice. Len Ciminelli, Ken Brown, Bill Mosdell, Wayne Goss, Ivan Tuura, Mario Govorchin and Brad Parker added singles.

Smooth sailing at Sidney as able crew goes to work

Dave Myerscough, an outstanding self-starter in the sailing game, is again heading this year's race committee for the second annual Sidney regatta, to be held on the Dominion Day weekend in conjunction with Sidney Days.

Dave, who started the Saanich Peninsula Sailing Assoociation in 1974 and is again doing a stint as the club's commodore, has some pretty able help on his team. They include Hobie Cat organizer Brian McLeod; Jim Ross, who crewed in Reality, the first Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet boat to finish in Swiftsure; Barry Philbrook; Bent Jespersen, the Sidney boatbuilder who built Reality, and Roger Anstey, Merv Britten will be in charge of the keel boat racing.

All keel boat racing will be PHRF and there will be a three-race series for the Captain Cook Trophy.

There will be class racing for Stars, Six-Metres, Cal 20s and Viking 28s so long as there are at least four boats to make up a class.

Gaff-rigged boats will have a three-race series in competition for the Gaffers Trophy.

Five-race series will be held for Fireballs, Lasers, Hobie Cat 14s, 16s and 18s; Windsurfers, Sabots and El Toros. All series for small boat divisions will start from Tulista Park on Lochside Drive.

The eighth annual Great Sidney Rowing Review will be held on the Monday at 10:30 a.m. with five divisions — nine-foot and under, 12-foot, canoe class, 17-foot class as well as an unlimited class. There will also be a swimming race from Sidney Island to Sidney, sponsored by Rimpac Divers of Sidney.

All PHRF and Gaffer series, as well as the rowing events, will start off the floats at the bottom of Beacon Avenue.

Registration will take place in the lobby of the Sidney Hotel on Saturday, June 30 from 6 to 9 p.m. and on the Sunday at 9:45 a.m. Race instructions will be available at those times.

Racing for all classes will begin at 10 a.m. on the Sunday.

A fleet of 70 boats turned out for Sidney's first regatta and Dave is hoping to easily topple that record this year.

Dave, who once raced Stars, is now an avid Windsurfer with the rapidly growing Victoria fleet. Unfortunately for him, the District Windsurfer Championships will be raced off Jericho Beach in Vancouver on the same weekend. However, his son Richard will be competing and should stand a good chance. At 13 years of age he already ranks third in national lightweight competition.

The winners of the Jericho Beach competition will go to the American championships, to be held at the Deer Cove Reservoir in Utah from Aug. 6 to 11. Air fares to Utah will be the prizes.

About 70 Windsurfers are expected to enter, about the same number as in the nationals, which were held in Jericho Beach last fall. Victoria sailor Ross Harrington became national lightweight champion at that time.

The B.C. Windsurfer Championships, to be held in Sidney at the end of July should provide some good shots for shutter-bug fans. These are real racing machines that provide lots of action. Again, air fares to Utah will be up for grabs.

Some of the boats belonging to the Canoe Bay Sailing Club can be expected to do well at the Sidney Regatta. The club ended its official sailing season last weekend with its annual 48-mile Salt Spring Island race.

Thirty-eight boats competed in the overnight race, which was won by Bill Martin's Cal 25 Georgia Girl. After her came Roger Vale's Temenos, Holger Brix's Caliante, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua, Kevin McCullough's Vagrant, Roy Hingley's Romada II.

The annual inter-club race between the Royal Victoria Yacht Club and the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, takes place on Sunday in Esquimalt Harbor. The four-race series begins at 10 a.m.

Fred Douglas's Vertu was the overall winner of the long-distance race sailed by the squadron's cruising boats last Sunday. Runner-up was Stu Russell's Ithaqua.

Dolphins' outlook an optimistic one

A solid nucleus of returning players plus the infusion of several experienced performers from other parts of Canada has Victoria Dolphins sailing high on the wings of optimism.

Dwellers of the cellar in British Columbia's Big Four Junior Football League, the team's executives unanimously looked for a change of fortunes, all for the better, as they rolled up their sleeves to start preparations for another campaign.

Dolphins open pre-season training Sunday at their Vanalman street headquarters, starting at 7 p.m. Victoria opens the season Aug. 5 in Vancouver and plays its first home game Aug. 19.

And the schedule is one reason coach Paul Shortt "likes." Dolphins open with two games on the road, then play their next five all at Royal Athletic Park.

It is a home stand, said Shortt, that is sure to inspire confidence.

More important, however, is talent destined to show up in Dolphin uniforms.

Most of the offensive line and backfield is back from last year. Quarterback Bernie Kidd, halfback Kym Clarke, the club's most valuable player, and Dave Fletcher are expected to play key roles in Victoria's expected revitalization in the six-team league.

"We've pleasantly suprised," admitted Shortt.

Perhaps the biggest catch is the return of defensive tackle Todd Petersen from a small college in California. The 19-year-old turned down offers to attend another American junior college to play for Dolphins this season.

Peterson was adjudged the top young lineman at a B.C. Lions' rookie camp two years ago.

Four other prominent "walk-ons" are Dan McLennan, a tackle from Hamilton; Jerry Reddick, a defensive back from Halifax; running back Glen Elford and end Ian Rich, both with the Canadian junior champion Regina Rams last season.

Shortt also sees an improvement in the team's average size. Last year, he said, Dolphins average weight was around 185 pounds. This year he expects it to be "closer to 200."

Other teams in the league are Vancouver Meralomas, Renfrew Trojans, Surrey Rams, Richmond Raiders and North Shore Cougars, back after a year's absence.

Mitchs Butch wire-to-wire in Sandown Park feature

Mitchs Butch, a six-year-old gelding, won the featured ninth race Thursday at Sandown Raceway.

Mitchs Butch led from start to finish in setting its best Sandown time of two minutes, .04 seconds for the mile. Thirteens Best was second and Senga Lykil third.

A place finish by Senga Suntan in the seventh and the show by Senga Lykil were the best perfomances of the fou. Senga standardbreds which ran Thursday.

The Senga horses are the product of Gunnholme Farms in Lloydminster, one of the largest and most successful standardbred breeding establishments in Western Canada.

The other two Sengas — Scarlett in the third and Norquay in the fourth — finished last and fourth, respectively. Senga Scarlett made a spectacular rally to win last Friday after breaking stride in the backstretch but failed to recover after doing the same thing on the backstretch turn Thursday. Senga Norquay was a winner last time out after two place finishes.

Three exactors in the 10-race card paid more than $100 with the largest coming in the first race when Little Duster and Outright Swede returned $200.50.

Squire provides spark

Mike Squire played a strong two-way role Thursday as Lumberworld bounced Capital Radiators 14-4 in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

On the mound, Squire expanded his unbeaten streak to six games by tossing a six-hitter.

At the plate, he bashed a pair of two-run homers and a run-producing single to help his club close within half a game of league-leading Farmer Construction.

One of Squire's homers, as well as a three-run four-bagger by Tony Long, came in the 10-run second inning.

Times News Services

It's still three weeks before the All-Star break but already Philadelphia Phillies are having clubhouse fights, talking about a must-win series, and hearing rumors about a change in managers.

The Phillies, a team many favored to run away with its fourth consecutive National League East pennant, has become a fourth-place club with first-place talent, Going into tonight's big weekend series with Montreal, the Phillies are trailing the Expos by 4½ games, with a 35-31 record.

Personnel director Paul Owens has come out this week saying there may be changes made if the Phillies don't return to their winning ways.

"I'll tell you one thing, we better come out of it before this weekend," said Owens after the Phillies lost two of three from Atlanta. "To me, we've got to get back in it. We're seven down in the loss column right now. The patience part is over now on my part. They should have known three weeks ago that they have a fight on their hands.

"The handwriting's on the wall after Sunday. This is probably the most key series we went to. And actually not Montreal per se — the next three series (Montreal, Chicago and St. Louis). Those are the three clubs we've got to walk right through to get back in the race. We can't go into Montreal and play like the last two times we played them (losing all six games)."

After a recent loss to Atlanta by 10-4, the Philadelphia dressing room was like a scene out the "Bronx Zoo." Reliever Tug McGraw and shortstop Larry Bowa had a shouting match at each other and pitching coach Herm Starette threw a chair and stormed out of the clubhouse.

Manager Danny Ozark is hearing the sounds of unhappiness from Philadelphia writers and the fans. Ozark had received a vote of confidence from Phillies' owner Ruly Carpenter, but Owens has said the mental part of the game, particularly motivation, seems to be the Phillies' problem. And motivation is a manager's job.

A bright spot for the Phillies this year has been Pete Rose. Rose, the highly-paid free agent, is leading the Phillies regulars with a .339 average.

THE NAME GAME RULES AND PROCEDURES

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print you name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.

Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.

2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday and Sunday and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist but may only be used once in any one entry.

3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.

4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.

5. All correctly completed entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.

6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.

7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.

8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.

9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to The Name Game will be final.

Athletics stay in contention

Ken Fox hurled a four-hitter Thursday and helped Elks-Athletics stay even in their bid for a berth in the British Columbia senior "B" softball championship tournament July 12-15 in Vancouver.

Elks-Athletics tripped Seaboard Construction, the defending Western Canada champions, 3-1 in a district round-robin playoff game at Royal Athletic Park to give both clubs a 2-1 record.

In an earlier game, Barry Wilkin fired a one-hitter as Seaboard blanked Tally-Ho, the other team in the playoff, 2-0.

In final games Saturday, Tally-Ho — now 0-2 — faces Elks-Athletics at 12 noon and Seaboard at 2 p.m. at Central Park.

Elks—Athletics collected all their runs in the sixth inning with a double by Bob Wilson providing the key blow. Wayne Forlund doubled and scored for Seaboard in the fourth.

In a regular Stuffy McGinnis Men's League game, Labatts edged Strandlund Brothers 6-5 at Central. Bill Clifford hit a double and a homer to pace the victory.

At Hyacinth Park, Lorna Lundeen, Lee Wallace and Sandy Ferguson supplied most of the offensive power as Stockers North Americans dropped Strathcona Stingers 15-1 while Bemister's Welding and Butler Brothers struggled to a 2-2 tie in Victoria Senior Women's League play.

Lundeen chalked up three hits in five trips to the plate.

In Heywood Men's League play, Mears Realty rallied for three runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to defeat Brentwood 5-4 at Heywood Avenue Park.

Ernie Lea drove in two of the runs with a base hit and Don Frampton smacked a two-run homer for Brentwood in the first inning.

At Macdonald Park, Wayne Butz was the winning pitcher as Trafalgar Legion tripped Victoria Ambulance 4-2 in a Macdonald Men's League tussle.

It's hard to sell the Peugeot 504

Salesmen are always complaining that they can't practice their skills with potential 504 buyers. The car sells itself. One test-drive is usually enough to convince anybody. Meanwhile, our salesmen stand by and watch the 504s do their job.

Drop in and see the Peugeot 504 for yourself. But try to ask our salesmen a few questions. It'll make them feel better.

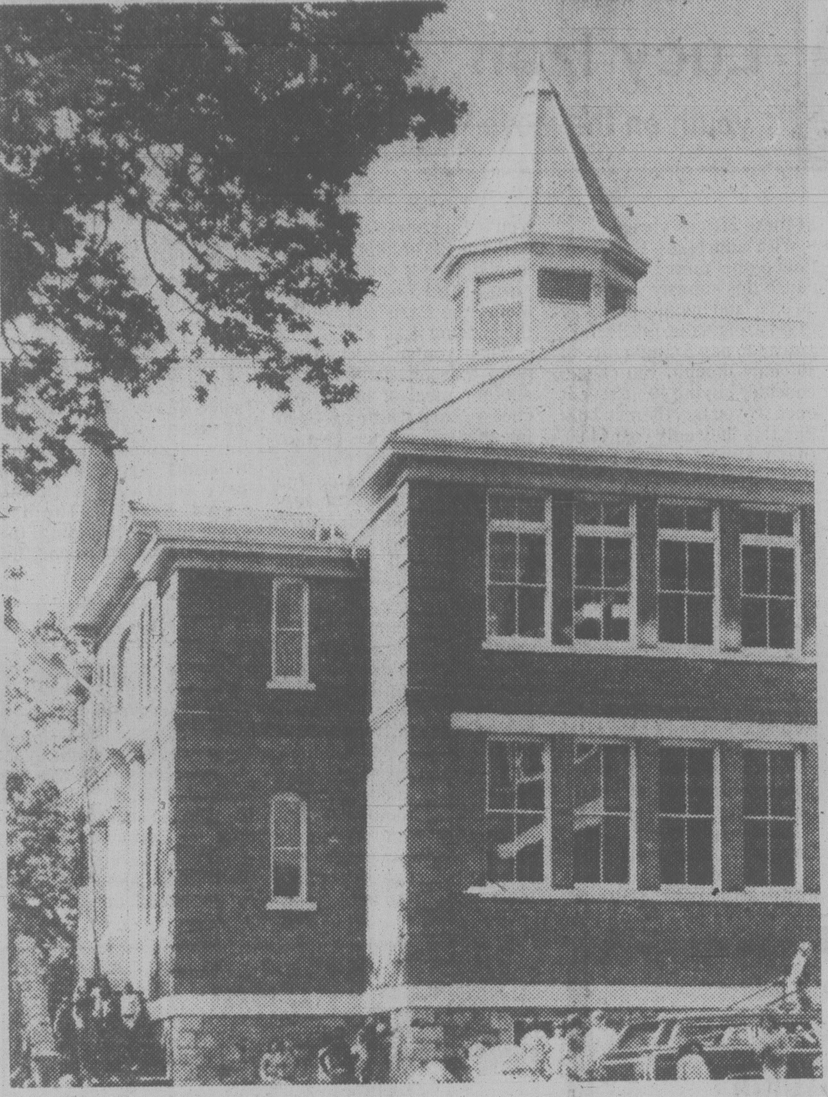
Elizabeth Forbes



Lampson school would serve as area's cutural centre

A first major step has been taken by interested groups toward having the Lampson Street School re-opened as a cultural centre.

They have formed the Greater Victoria Cultural Centre Society, with every intention of working through it to achieve their ambitious goal.

The school, now designated a heritage building, has been vacant about three years. It is ideally situated for the purpose this society envisions.

Not only would it bring many cultural groups together in shared accommodation, it would also give each one working space where equipment could be permanently set up and used at any time by whole memberships or by individual members in the different groups.

Right now, as Frances Smith, secretary of the new society, points out, most cultural organizations store their equipment in members' basements.

"They take what is needed from those inadequate storage places, carry it to wherever they happen to be gathering, then truck it back again after the meeting."

Mrs. Smith adds that members of Greater Victoria School District 61 have expressed interest in the society's proposal for utilization of the old school.

"That could mean the board might be willing, sometime in the future, to give us a long-term rental agreement of some sort"

First, however, there are more steps to be taken and a few hurdles to surmount.

The new society knows it will need approval of the provincial government and, since the recent election, of Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis, in order to be in line for a grant to help restore and renovate the school and to bring it up to fire marshals' standards.

It also knows that to be eligible for such a grant it must prove it can run the place as a cultural centre without becoming a burden on various levels of government.

To prove that point there is need to organize a feasibility study as quickly as possible.

"It's a bit like deciding which came first, the chicken or the egg," says Pamela Charlesworth, an executive member of the new society.

"In order to get a grant we must prove we can go on from there ourselves, yet we need money right now to mount a feasibility study that will convince the provincial government of that fact."

Here both she and Mrs. Smith speak of lottery funds from which money is given on occasion to recreational groups involved in active sports, and from which they would very much like to get a small grant.

This could materialize if the powers that be can be persuaded groups represented by the society are in the recreational field — non-physical in most instances, of course, but nevertheless recreational.

With a feasibility study completed, a provincial government grant approved and renovation started on the school, the resulting publicity, they believe, would persuade many more groups and individuals to join the society as active members and still others as supporting members.

Right now the new society represents around 1,000 men and women, young and not-so-young.

Charter groups include the Hand Weavers and Spinners Guild, the Victoria Society of Artists, the Esquimalt Arts and Crafts, the Victoria Aquarium Society and the Costume Society.

The last named has a valuable collection and desperately needs space to display it.

Also interested are ceramics and embroiderers guilds and flower arrangers.

If a cultural centre is opened in the old Lampson Street School, the society sees it filling an ever-expanding role not only as a home for cultural groups of every kind in the Greater Victoria area (the public library lists some 700 of them) but as a place for provincial and national cultural conferences and conventions and for cultural fairs.

"I can see the grounds of the old school filled with colorful marquees for such fairs," Pamela Charlesworth says.

Bill Cameron, first president of the new society believes that if they do succeed in having the Lampson Street School opened as a cultural centre, everything else will fall in line.

"We'll need a lot of help," he says, "but with the continued dedication and enthusiasm of present members — and of future members — I think we can do it."

Postscript: Any group or individual wishing to join the new society and to help in this ambitious project, as active or supporting members, should get in touch with Frances Smith, telephone 592-1602, or Pamela Charlesworth, 598-3072.

Too young for affair with teacher

YOUTH CLINIC

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I am in love with my teacher. I am a 15-year-old girl who is considered pretty. The teacher is blond and is really good-looking. He also teaches gym and is very muscular. In other words he is a hunk.

I think he is attracted to me. He always makes sexual remarks about me and is always talking to me, even after class. I think my friends are noticing my attraction to him and his to me.

He is married but I think his marriage is going on the rocks. I am really crazy about him. I even dress up for him.

Am I too young to have sex with my teacher? If not, how do I approach him about it?

ANSWER: Yes, you are too young to have sex with your teacher. I can understand that you would be attracted to someone you think is very handsome and that is perfectly normal.

However, to encourage your teacher, who is married (whether or not you think his marriage is working), and who is responsible for instructing you, is completely inappropriate.

It is also inappropriate of him to encourage your attentions, or to give you the idea that he is attracted to you. I can imagine that it must seem pretty exciting and a real boost to your ego, to feel that you are attractive or interesting enough to cause this kind of attention from an adult who is your teacher. But for you to act on your feelings would be wrong.

Acting on your feelings could cause a lot of trouble for your teacher and for yourself, and I would certainly advise you to find another "hunk" who is closer to your age.

DEAR DR. POWELL: Please print this letter so that I can tell other girls this. Do not have sex unless you really love the guy and are using contraceptives.

I am a 16-year-old girl who (very foolishly) had sex for the first time three nights ago. I am so upset that I can't eat, sleep, or relax, and now the thought of sex sickens me. Besides this and my feeling of disgust with myself, I am afraid that I could be pregnant. Naturally, I want to know the truth as soon as possible. How soon after conception can pregnancy be detected?

Because I don't want to create an unnecessary hassle, I want to be checked out before I tell anyone. Can you give the name of a free clinic where this can be done?

Sex was not worth all this. I didn't even enjoy it.

ANSWER: You have expressed, from your own experience, the anguish and guilt that may follow irresponsible sex, and your words of advice carry much more weight than any I can write. I hope this message will come across.

There are a great many who have experienced the same remorse and guilt that you have. However, there is no way to relive the past and undo or change past actions. You must learn how to benefit from a mistake and how to forgive yourself. A pregnancy as a result of a thoughtless moment of passion is disastrous.

The ususal pregnancy test shows up as positive about four weeks after conception. It is very difficult to confirm a pregnancy before that time. By then your period is two weeks late. It is easier for you to find out before you tell anyone, although you may need someone to talk to and share your worry. If you have a close friend you may have confided your problem already. I think you need some counselling even if you have not become pregnant.

There are birth control clinics where you can find out if you are pregnant and where you can discuss the possible solution if you are. Counsellors at these clinics can help you to come to terms with your feelings about sex. You cannot let this one experience influence the rest of your life. Sexual expression with someone you love is the most pleasurable and most intimate experience of life. You need to understand your own sexual feelings which are pretty mixed up at present.

DEAR DR. LEVINE: I'm 16 and I believe that I will be heterosexual, for I like girls and having relationships with them. My problem is that I want to experience homosexuality just to see what it's like yet I don't know how to go about this. I told one friend that I trust very much. Perhaps he understood what I said but that's all he did — understood. I'm not sure what to do and I would appreciate your advice.

ANSWER: Yours is certainly an unusual letter. Most people your age are not interested in experimenting with homosexuality, unless of course they have that particular orientation. There is a group of people who go both ways; that is, who have pleasurable sexual experiences with both sexes. These people are termed bisexual, for obvious reasons, and are much less common than pure heterosexuals.

But your situation is considerably different and I'm reluctant to give you advice, since too much information is lacking. For example, why do you want to experience homosexual sex? What are your fantasies like? What sexual experiences, of any kind, have you had? What did you expect — or want — your friend to do when you told him?

If you are able, try to discuss this with someone at a youth clinic, not because you necessarily are having a serious problem, but because one would have to know a lot more about you before suggesting a specific course of action. You are young enough that you may have some confusion about your sexal identity, and a counsellor may help you work that out.

DEAR DR. COTTER: I am a 14-year-old boy and my friend is 13, and the problem is his mother. He and I love each other, but his mom doesn't like me and doesn't want him to hang around with me. Everything was great when his dad was living at home, but since he left the mom and her boyfriend are trying to change everything.

My mother knows that my friend and I have to sneak around and pretend that we hate each other. She is getting fed up and is going to phone my friend's mother and ask her why she is ruining her son's life and choosing his friends for him. That would probably make things worse.

ANSWER: Your friend's situation is plainly one in which some family counselling is needed.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, the Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Lucy Izon

youth on the move

PARIS — Although this city has a terribly expensive reputation, it's one place that few budget travellers want to miss. The truth is, Paris doesn't have to cost the young traveller a fortune. In fact, I've found a nice hotel where four of us shared a larger room with breakfast for $9.25 a night each.

It wasn't purely by chance that we happened on the hotel. It was through a youth accommodation service known as the A.J.F. (Accueil des Jeunes en France). By simply going to their office at 16 rue du Pont Louis Philippe near the Hotel de Ville metro stop, we were able to arrange this reservation free of charge.

It's an excellent service I've used several times in the past — so far they've never been disappointing. This summer the A.J.F. will have four offices operating within the city. Altogether they will have 5,000 beds in youth centers and student residences available for young tourists.

So, if you're planning on visiting Paris on a student budget here's where you can get help. You can visit the office I used or if you're entering by train can look for them at the arrival platform of the North Station (Gare de Nord). This office is open 9 A.M. to 9 P.M., Monday to Saturday.

The main office will be operating at 119 Plateau Beaubourg, that's near the Chatelet metro stop. You'll be able to get assistance here between 9:30 A.M. and 7:30 P.M., Monday through Saturday. An office will also open in the Latin Quarter between July 2 and August 31. You can find it at 6 place St. Michel. It's open Monday to Friday, 9:30 A.M. to 6:30 P.M.

The A.J.F. will also be publishing three brochures that can be a real help to young travellers this summer. The first will list youth accommodation centres around Paris and its vicinity. The second will list youth accommodation possibilities in the French provinces. The third will give you the information and welcome offices in Paris I've just told you about.

Copies will be available free, they're now being distributed to Air France ticket offices, French Government Tourist offices and French Embassies and Consulates around the world. If you can't get copies before you leave North America, you will be able to pick them up at these offices abroad.

With addresses I've mentioned the metro stops because this subway system is an easy and inexpensive way to get around the city. Before you go to pay a single fare of 60 cents though, you should consider buying 10 tickets at once. If you buy them in bulk like this they only cost $4.00; that's almost a 50% reduction. If you want, you can use these tickets for bus rides around the city, but most routes will cost several tickets.

Eating out in restaurants can put a big bite in your travel dollar, especially if you're around major tourist sight areas. In a cafe by the Louvre I found myself paying $3.75 for coffee and toast. At a snack stand I paid $1.45 for a small bottle of cola. It's establishments like these that give Paris its expensive reputation.

If you're going sightseeing for the day, plan ahead, shop at a grocery store beforehand and pack a lunch. You'll find parks near most of the sights of interest. Plan on picnicing it and enjoy the sunshine. You won't be alone, the Parisians will be there doing it as well.

When you've reached the point that you can't look at another meal of bread and cheese, keep your eyes open for the self-service restaurants. I had roast chicken, vegetables and coffee for $3.45. You'll find these restaurants located near major shopping and business areas. After all, the people who live and work in Paris can't afford to pay inflated tourist prices either.

Much of Paris is best seen on foot. The walk from the Arc de Triomphe at the Charles de Gaulle metro stop down Champs Elysees to the Louvre is the one I found most fascinating on my first visit. Not only does it take you past a number of the interesting sights, as you start down Avenue des Champs you'll pass the main tourist information office at number 127. It's open 9 A.M. to 10 P.M., 7 days a week. A good place to stop for a few minutes for free maps or answers to nagging questions.

As a student or youth visiting Paris, you're eligible for various special breaks. Students with International Identification can get up to a 50% reduction at many museums, including the Louvre. I've found that even a non-student under 26 can usually get the same reduction by presenting a FIYTO card (Federation of International Youth Travel Organizations). If you're not eligible for either of these you can still visit some of the major museums free. You'll just have to travel with the crowd. Sunday's the day when many, including the Louvre, open their doors for nothing.

Old poems net fortune

LONDON (Reuter) — A 15th century manuscript of English verse thought by its owner to be worth $200 has fetched $180,000 dollars at Sotheby's. Sotheby's said the anthology, which includes 15 previously unrecorded Middle English poems, was told to a London dealer.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

Saw needed for slicing?

DEAR ABBY: Now it has been disclosed that a certain brand of bread whose advertising claims "400 per cent more fibre" uses wood in part for that fibre!

The following questions come to mind:

How much of that bread must I eat in order to bark?

Will it help in searching for my roots?

Will it make me a budding genius?

Will it be easier to get leaves of absence?

Will it sap my strength?

Will my son be a chip off the old block?

I'm ready to climb the walls. (Panelled, of course.) I pine for some answers.

— MARGARET

DEAR MARGARET: I wooden know.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I will celebrate our 40th wedding anniversary soon. Our children plan a party for us in the social hall of our church.

A few years ago you ran a sample invitation in your column which I liked very much. It was a nice way of saying, "No gifts, please."

Will you please run it again? I'm sure others will find it helpful, too. Thank you.

— A FAN

DEAR FAN: Here it is:

DEAR READERS: I have stated many times that any mention whatsoever of gifts was improper on an invitation. This includes the forthright "No gifts, please," as well as the tasteless (in my view) suggestion that cash is preferred to any other type of gift.

Many sent sample invitations in which gifts were mentioned. Below are two that changed my mind:

"Jane and Bob Smith invite you to dine with us on the evening of June 1 at our home at 7 p.m.

"It is in celebration of our 20th wedding anniversary. Your friendship is a cherished gift. We respectfuly request no other."

"The children of Iver and Helen Dahl invite you to celebrate with them the 50th wedding anniversary of their parents. A reception will be held May 7, at 2 p.m., at the Elmhurst Country Club.

"We request you help in compiling a book which recalls memories from our parents' first 50 years of marriage. On the enclosed sheet, we ask that you write one memory or event that you have shared with them, and return it to us by April 26. We believe that the loving memories they have shared with you, their friends, would be the most treasured gift they could receive; therefore, we request that no other gift be sent."

Rising cost of fuel to blame for airline surcharges

for consumers

If your favorite travel agent looks a little harried, it could have something to do with airline surcharges. Many consumers, when they go to pick up their summer holiday tickets, are dismayed to discover that even though they prepaid the fare when the booking was made, they have a small balance to settle because of the increase in jet fuel.

The travel agents are getting it in the neck because they have to field the consumer complaints when they have nothing to do with the surcharge. The airlines tab the agents for the extra amount and the agent can do nothing but recover it from you.

The airlines' alibi is that they had no way of preidicting how much fuel would increase in price. They say in the interests of serving the passengers they tried to keep fares low but got caught by rising costs. Whether the argument is valid or not, and I find it hard to believe they can't estimate their costs eight weeks in advance, the consumer is still left with a feeling of being "had".

When you've planned the cost of a holiday, it hurts to pay a surcharge on a ticket you thought you owned. The airlines might do well to reconsider their pricing policy to avoid antagonizing their customers. After all, the airlines, by having seat sales and other special deals, have established a climate in which the customer expects a bargain. We wonder how they can run a sale one week . . . and then tack on a surcharge for other flights.

In the meantime, don't pick on your travel agent, unless he fails to tell you one important thing: If you object to the surcharge on your ticket, you can cancel your flight without penalty, within a reasonable time after notification (usually a week to ten days). Some agents have been known not to pass this useful bit of information on to their customers. I suppose they don't want to lose your business. Actually, less than five per cent of travellers are cancelling their flights because of the increases.

The consumers who are being hit by the surcharges are generally those who have bought a special deal: charter flights and other reduced rates. Those passengers who are paying the regular fare for scheduled flights are less likely to be affected. However, air fares generally are expected to increase.

Fuel costs in Canada could be considered relatively stable compared to some countries. For example, jet fuel in Ireland and Greece has tripled in price in the last three months. Most airlines have three or six month contracts for the supply of fuel, fixing its cost, but many contracts will be renegotiated in the fall so you can expect the added costs to wind up with the consumer.

Another unexpected inconvenience could affect your flight plan, owing once again to the fuel situation. If you get on a charter to California you might find yourself landing in Omaha or perhaps Salt Lake City to refuel. It isn't just the cars that are thirsty on the west coast. Aircraft are lining up too, so flight plans are frequently altered to avoid delays and lack of fuel in California.

Another possible source of consumer irritation is unreal expectations on CP Air's Skybus flights. They have been adequately represented in advertising as no frills flights. No meals, no special service, no movies, no music. However, travellers will probably miss the regular service and demand meals. One travel agent told me he expects some "jolly scenes" until consumers realize that they are required to fly across the continent without cabin service or excess baggage accommodation.

A tour operator in Los Angeles gets 10 per cent of his business from Canadians attracted to his low-price, no-frills offerings. However, he says our expectations are unrealistic. We are not sophisticated travellers. We are not prepared to make adjustments when we buy a budget deal. We want the extras. So while 10 per cent of his business comes from Canada, Canadian consumers are responsible for 90 per cent of the complaints. He's considering cutting us off as customers.

I once bought a budget deal to St. Lucia. The hotel was represented as on the beach. It was. But so was the airport. There was a reason why the deal was so cheap. We like to think we get what we pay for . . . until we pay bottom dollar. Then we want the best.

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

I'm 63. I notice that many of my friends have trouble with their prostate. Is prostate trouble always on the horizon for men as they get older? — MR. H. F.

DEAR MR. F.:

Your letter brings to light the fact that many men worry about the inevitability of prostate trouble. This has no real validity because it is known that only a relatively small percentage of men with enlarged prostates develop sufficient difficulty in urination to require medical or surgical treatment.

Almost all men past the age of 45 develop some degree of enlargement. In most instances, there are no early warning signs.

But when one notes a need for urinating more during the night, when one experiences difficulty in beginning a stream of urine, straining during urination or the sensation of incomplete emptying of the bladder, it may be necessary to consider active treatment.

There is no guesswork about the progression and size of the prostate. If symptoms suggest this problem, examination of the prostate, through the rectum, is readily made and its size ascertained. When necessary, direct examination with a cystoscope is done. X-ray techniques also are available.

There are even techniques by which the flow of urine can be measured and compared with the normal flow. This is known as "uroflowmetry."

Sometimes, massage of the prostate in early cases of enlargement is beneficial and effective.

A great many investigations continue at scientific institutions, with the hope that early enlargement of the prostate can be controlled. To date, these researches have not been of great value.

Fluorosis data 'news to Ontario'

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government is not aware of health problems related to high levels of fluoride near Cornwall, Environment Minister Harry Parrott told the legislature Thursday.

His comments contradict recent reports that high levels of fluoride emitted from the Reynolds Metal Co. aluminum smelter near Massena, N.Y., have caused cattle deaths, crop damage and illness among Indian children on Cornwall Island.

Parrott, a dentist by profession, said a recently-retired dental consultant with the Eastern Ontario health unit says there is no evidence of fluorosis in the children.

"Over a 10-year period he has occasionally seen a white spot, such as occurs on the tooth enamel with increased fluoride intake, among children from Cornwall Island but he has not seen the sort of damage associated with actual fluorosis," Parrott said.

"In fact, he indicates that the dental health of local children, including those on Cornwall Island, is very good and he attributes this largely to the fact that Cornwall's drinking water is fluoridated."

Meanwhile, two authorities on fluoride pollution say the federal government might not act because of a pro-fluoride bias in the department of health and welfare.

"North Americans have convinced themselves that there is no human injury from fluoride unless there's bone exestosis (lumps which grow on the bone)," said Dr. Dyson Rose, a retired scientist with the National Research Council.

Rose and John Marier, a council researcher — co-authors of the council's most recent report on fluoride in the environment — said fluoride has already been documented as a contributor to some human illnessed a contributor in some (human) illnesses including bone and kidney diseases, and diseases related to diabetes and nutrition.

"On the cause-of-death report, you will probably never see it, but you'll see a non-medical scientist in there saying fluoride is contributing," Rose said.

Rose and Marier said fluoride's use in preventing tooth decay should meet the same fate as the use of the pesticide DDT and the drug thalidomide.

Rose and Marier predicted that, unless checked, the pro-fluoride bias will result in many people contacting crippling diseases and leave the government having to cope with a "garage full of bodies."

They called for urgent, top-priority research into the human health hazards of fluoride pollution.

"A lot of people try to sit down an say that for every bit of progress, there has to be some cost," Marier said.

Unfortunately, Cornwall Island residents are getting hurt and the island is "the ultimate example of too high a cost."

PQ referendum date disappoints Clark

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Clark said Thursday he is disappointed that Quebec Premier Rene Levesque decided to wait until next spring to hold his referendum on sovereignty-association.

But he said he is confident Quebecers will vote for federalism and "will choose to build their future in a great country which offers them an unlimited potential."

Repeating a campaign promise to give "a fresh face to federalism," Clark said in a press release that he expects Quebec to continue participating in federal-provincial attempts to reform the constitution.

Bill Jarvis, federal-provincial relations minister, said Conservatives are disappointed at the year's delay, adding that there will be increased uncertainty both within and outside the country.

"But that is the choice of Mr. Levesque," Jarvis added. "We can't quarrel with his right to make that choice."

Former prime minister Pierre Trudeau said in a press release that he hopes the question in the referendum will be direct and straightforward.

"I have confidence in the quality of this country's democratic process," Trudeau said, "and I am firmly convinced that Canada will emerge from the Quebec referendum test stronger and more unified than ever."

Jarvis said the timing will have little effect on the outcome of the referendum:

"We remain very confident that the people of Quebec will choose to remain in Canada despite the season of the year they are called upon (to vote)."

Heward Grafftey, minister of state for social programs and an anglophone MP from Quebec, said: "I deeply believe that the great majority of Quebecers want a renewed federalism."

He said Clark will be able to "change the atmosphere" of discussions between the federal government and the provinces and will arrive at some middle ground between the status quo and independence for Quebec.

Other Conservative ministers said the Clark government planned to participate in the debate before the referendum, in which the provincial government will ask Quebecers for a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association — a type of political independence with economic links with the rest of Canada.

They refused to say whether Clark is considering holding his own national referendum, as Trudeau had proposed in legislation that died in the last Parliament.

The Conservative government had not yet planned its strategy for the referendum campaign, said Supply Minister Roch LaSalle, one of only two Conservatives elected from Quebec May 22.

The two Quebec MPs and the three French-speaking Senators whom Clark appointed to his cabinet would suggest to the full cabinet next month what approach to take, LaSalle said.

Jarvis said the government will work with any federalist group — no matter what its partisan affiliation — to fight separatism during the referendum debate.

Trudeau agreed that "we will work in close co-operation with the other pro-federalist groups, under the co-ordination of the umbrella committee established by Quebec referendum legislation."

Pact protest

QUEBEC (CP) — Hundreds of provincial government professional employees demonstrated before the national assembly building Thursday to protest the state of contract talks between Quebec and their union, the Syndicat des Professionnels du Gouvernement du Quebec.

Mandarin resigns

OTTAWA (CP) — Maurice Leclair, one of the top-ranking public servants in the former Trudeau government, has resigned as secretary to the treasury board, Prime Minister Clark announced Thursday.

Leclair, a medical doctor who joined the public service as deputy minister of health in 1970, will become vice-president of Canadian National Railways.

Clark said in a press release that Leclair had told the previous government he intended to leave several months ago, but will stay at treasury board until the fall "to assist the new government through the transition period."

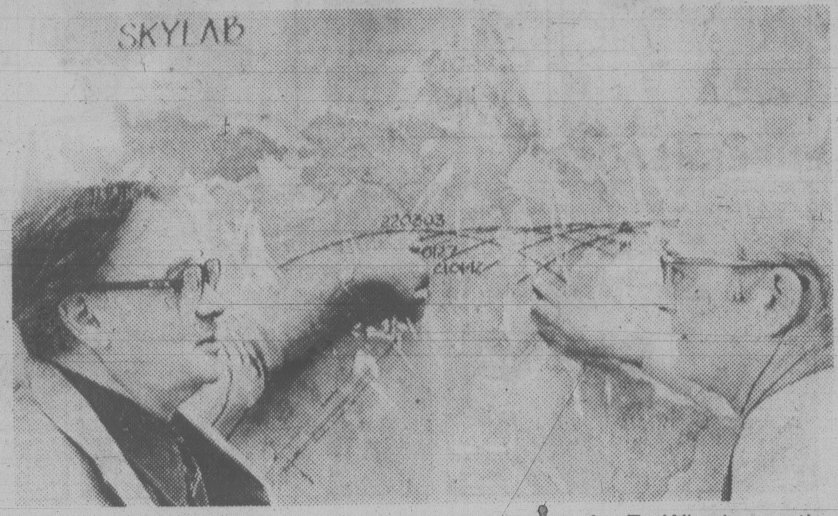
Relax, Chicken Lickens, Ottawa's set for Skylab



A. .F. Wigglesworth, left, and William Lobbam, check map in Skylab situation-control room.

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal emergency planners, geared for the fiery re-entry of the derelict Skylab space station next month, have assembled a situation-control centre here in case pieces of the bungalow-sized craft hit Canada.

Lesley Lynn, a spokesman for Emergency Planning Canada, said at a press conference Thursday that provincial and federal officials with helicopters and direct-line radio-telephone communications are ready for the United States space craft's plunge to earth.

Lynn said during a tour of the federal agency's situation room in the external affairs department building that there now is a 95 per cent chance that the 79-tonne station will fall from its decaying orbit between July 7 and 17 and a 50 per cent chance it will come down July 12.

However, the odds of a Skylab shard hitting a human being have been estimated at 600 billion to one.

Skylab orbits the earth once every 87 minutes and is over southern Canada for 22 minutes each day. Major cities in its path include Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal.

Lynn said that if alerted by NORAD that the station will fall on Canadian territory, the situation room duty officer will immediately alert emergency planning officials in the regions and cities involved.

"A helicopter will be on stand-by before Skylab is due to re-enter . . . and in the remote possibility that any pieces of debris land in Canada the Skylab team will fly to the impact site and take it from there," she said.

Although Skylab will break into about 500 pieces, only eight large chunks, weighing between 8 and 24 tonnes, will likely survive the searing heat of re-entry and be scattered over a path 6,200 kilometres long and 160 wide.

There are no plans for evacuation of urban areas but a portable military hospital will be available in case a city is hit. Pilots and sailors in probable impact zones will also be warned by air traffic controllers and ship-to-shore radio.

The North American Air Defence Command (NORAD) and NASA space controllers in Colorado and Houston, Tex., constantly track the station but cannot accurately predict its re-entry or where it will come down until 24 hours before.

NASA space controllers managed to turn Skylab sideways Wednesday in a manoeuvre they hope will allow them to steer it away from inhabited areas.

Although it is not a sure thing, the manoeuvre may help controllers stabilize the craft as it nears re-entry and would permit last-minute course changes if necessary.

Skylab was put in orbit in 1973 and was used for scientific experiments by three crews of astronauts. The station has been abandoned since the last team left in 1974 and, unlike the Soviet Union's Cosmos 954 satellite, which broke up over Western and Northern Canada a year ago, it is non-nuclear.

Although NASA planners have always known that the solar-powered Skylab had a limited life span and would eventually fall from its 408-kilometre orbit, they went ahead with the project because they estimated there was only a one chance in 150 that it would strike an inhabited area.

Abacus Cities defaults again

CALGARY (CP) — The receiver for Abacus Cities Ltd. says the company has defaulted for the second time on payments of some of its outstanding debts.

Melvin Zwaig, president of Toronto-based Thorne Riddell Inc., said Thursday that Abacus has defaulted on the quarterly payments due on $23 million in secured notes used in the purchase of Imperial General Properties Ltd. of Toronto and has failed to repay a $2.8-million loan from Thomas Adams Distillers Ltd. of Vancouver.

The payments were due June 15.

Zwaig said in a telephone interview the payment to Imperial will have to await the sale of 30 Abacus properties, now being negotiated to generate cash for the troubled development company.

Payment on the notes, held by Imperial after a complicated takeover deal last year, was originally to have been made April 10.

Abacus and affiliated companies had agreed to pay quarterly interest totalling $646,000, but only one of the affiliates, British Pacific Securities Ltd., was able to pay its share and the remaining payments were postponed until June 15.

Toyko summit costing $2.7 for security

OTTAWA (CP) — Journalists accompanying Prime Minister Joe Clark to the seven-nation economic summit in Tokyo next week may as well leave their bathing suits at home — there will be no water in the pool.

The drained swimming pools are part of elaborate security arrangements explained to reporters Thursday, although nobody here could suggest what danger filled pools might pose.

The RCMP officer in charge of safety for the 75-member Canadian delegation said he had never seen such intense security at an international conference.

It is costing the Japanese government $2.7 million to protect the leaders of the western industrial democracies during their two-day meeting, June 28 and 29.

The streets, hotels, embassies and meeting places of Tokyo will be patrolled by 33,000 armed police. For the last month the Canadian embassy has been constantly surrounded by 280 Japanese guards.

The Canadian delegation, which leaves Sunday, will be the first official summit party to arrive at Haneda Airport. Clark will be taken to downtown Tokyo by helicopter, the journalists will follow by bus.

At no time will journalists be permitted access to Clark or any member of his delegation without special authorization.

All summit participants and reporters, except the 450-member contingent from the United States, will stay at the world's second-largest hotel, the 2,000-room New Otani Hotel and Tower. The hotel is off limits to tourists and local businessmen.

The U.S. delegation has taken over an entire wing of the nearby Okura Hotel.

Journalists will be restricted to the long, low hotel section of the New Otani, government officials to an attached 40-storey tower.

The first 20 storeys of the tower have been left empty to act as a protective buffer zone.

The Japanese Red Army has threatened to disrupt the meeting and other radical groups from Japan and around the world have said they will knock out power, water and air communications in an attempt to thwart the summit.

Python excerpt scrapped

TORONTO (CP) — A 12-minute segment from the sound track of Monty Python's latest film, Brian of Nazareth, has been judged too offensive for a national audience, CBC Radio has announced.

Officials said that, because the material could not be edited to conform to CBC standards of good taste without making the program invalid, the entire show has been scrapped.

It was scheduled for broadcast Saturday night on The Entertainers.

Bidding Quiz

Partner bids One Spade. What would you respond with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠K83 ♡AJ6 ◇KJ7 ♣KQ84
2. ♠K ♡Q9872 ◇AKJ93 ♣Q6
3. ♠95 ♡J763 ◇732 ♣AKJ10
4. ♠Q96 ♡4 ◇9654 ♣AJ973

1. Three notrump — In effect, this bid says to partner: "I have 16 or 17 high-card points; my distribution is 4-3-3-3 or 4-4-3-2; I have strength in the other three suits. If your values are clearly above a minimum opening bid, let's reach at least a small slam. If you have a minimum opening bid, and your hand is suitable for notrump, please pass. If you have a minimum bid that you think will play better in a suit, please feel free to bid again. If you bid four spades I'll pass; if you bid four hearts I'll either pass or bid four spades; if you bid four of a minor Ill either bid four spades or raise you to five of the minor."

2. Two hearts — Some players bid according to the strength of a suit rather than its length, and they might therefore respond two diamonds instead of two hearts. In general, it is much better to respond in the higher-ranking of two suits of equal length, even when there is a marked disparity in the high-card quality of the suits If you were to bid diamonds first and hearts later, your partner would naturally think you had only four hearts. This could easily lead to the wrong contract.

3. One notrump — This indicates a notrump type of hand containing 6 to 9 high-card points. Obviously, the present hand fits into that category. You might feel tempted to respond two clubs on the basis of the high-card quality of the suit, but there are several objections that could be lodged against this response.

One is that you would be indicating 10 or more points by naming a new suit in the two level; another is that you strongly suggest five or more clubs; and still another objection is that two clubs forces partner to bid again while one notrump does not. It might easily turn out that the best contract is one notrump.

4. Two spades — Here also you might be tempted to bid two clubs in order to show your suit, but you would find yourself in hot water if partners rebid were two spades. You'd now probably feel torn between the desire to show support for partner's suit by bidding three spades (with very slender values), and the desire to pass two spades, even though you've never revealed your trump support. Dilemmas of this kind can be easily avoided by raising partner's spades at once, indicating 6 to 9 points and trump support. Simplest is best.

Tomorrow: Adjusting the odds.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, June 23
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Ideas can be transformed into viable concepts. Key is to check sources, collect and analyze data. Cancer, Capricorn individuals figure prominently. Decision due on which direction to take — choose course permitting greatest degree of versatility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on money, personal possessions, potential for expanding base of operations. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals figure in scenario. You get good news. You'll celebrate. You know that more freedom, recognition will be coming your way.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Cycle remains high despite restrictions. Accent on new starts, correct decisions, making known your views and benefiting as result. Aquarius, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. A roadblock becomes a stepping-stone.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Look behind the scenes. Be sure you have something to say about when the curtain goes up and down. Message should become crystal-clear. Member of opposite sex plays prominent role. Dream, if properly interpreted, could prove prophetic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Accent on desire, home repair and decoration, coming to terms with requests of family member. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives figure in important ways. Money invested in art objects, luxury items could bring joy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You get offer, but hold off on final decisions. Someone, possibly in position of authority, is not relating complete story. Be aware of it, play cards close to chest . . . understand that you do have backing in "high places."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have an almost mystical yearning to imprint philosophy, major concepts. You have the power, responsibility and creative energy to do what you know must be done. It now becomes obvious. It is time for a commitment!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Dilemma can be resolved; key is to tie loose ends. One close to you has legal contact which can prove of immeasurable aid: Aries, Gemini, Libra persons figure in scenario. Romantic involvement could prove "complicated."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Obtain valid hint from Scorpio message. Break free from obligation which was not rightly your own in first place. Accent on public response to your efforts, partnership proposal and marital status. Avoid direct confrontations. Wait, listen and observe.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be thorough, go slow, keep resolutions concerning diet, health and nutrition. Family member presents "pleasant surprise." Proverbial nest egg could save the day. Cancer and another Capricorn figure in interesting scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You could ride lucky streak. Elements of surprise, speculation and romance are featured. Young person pays meaningful compliment. Horizons expand and social activity increase. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Check sources, quotes — be thorough, specific and frank in expressing views. Aquarius, Scorpio persons play key roles. Accent on security, domicile, older individual who does have your best interests at heart. Time is an ally; play waiting game.

IF JUNE 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are perceptive, a natural detective, an excellent character analyst, a teacher and psychologist. You are never satisfied to merely know something happened — you want to know why it occurred. You are active, have sense of drama, are capable of expressing yourself in graphic manner. member of opposite sex find you attractive, but some are "afraid" of your ideas and progressive attitude. You broke away from many past obligations during this past year. Now, you are taking "cold plunge" into future. Key is to be independent, original, and to give full rein to creative resources.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

John shrugged out of his coat. "I had a look at that bit of land," he said. "It's an awkward shape, a triangle, but I didn't check the dimensions."

"I don't have them exactly myself," Ken replied. "All I know is what Mike said. The longest and shortest sides are perfect squares in metres, whole numbers. There's forty-four metres between the shortest and longest, and the middle side is sixteen metres longer than the shortest."

John nodded. "I guess we can figure it out from that. I did notice the dead elm in the middle is the same distance from each side."

What was that distance?

Thanks for idea to P.C. Mehta, Toronto, Ontario.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies.
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

305 DEATHS and FUNERALS

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left
filled with sadness

GARDENING

Hilda Beastall

Hellebores of various kinds are seen in local gardens under common names of Christmas-rose and Lenten-rose.

If you have these, it will help to know that the botanical name of the first is Helleborus niger, and the second is Helleborus orientalis. With this in mind, you can gain more information from any good plant encyclopedia

But just now, here is a suggestion. You may want more plants with these lovely, long-lasting flowers, yet hesitate to divide the ones already doing so well in the garden.

Other gardeners may have told you of failures in trying to raise Hellebores from seed even when bought from a usually reliable source. The reason is that the seed loses its viability within a short period.

Seed taken from your own Hellebore now and sown at once has a much better chance of germinating. And the plants will give a range of shades and even colors from which to select those most pleasing to you.

The seed pods are slow to mature, so don't hurry the process.

The pod should open naturally; therefore, it takes a daily inspection to be sure of not losing all the seed. A fine gauze tied over the head as a loose bag will save it from scattering.

Sow in a low pot or small seedbox, with rough drainage in the bottom, covered with a mixture of fine compost, leaf mould (or a little rubbed peat moss well-dampened) and sand. Dampen this well. Scatter the seeds thinly over the surface; press in gently and see that all are covered with a little of the mixture.

Set the container in a sheltered place on the south side of a protecting shrub (or in a coldframe) where winter cold (even a few degrees of frost) will reach, and winter rain will keep it damp.

Meanwhile, you need to give it a sprinkling of water frequently. The seeds will germinate from early fall through winter into spring. Don't be in a hurry to empty and discard the seed container. Keep it moderately damp and label it clearly with name and date of sowing.

Seedlings appear naturally around both H. niger and H. orientalis, if the soil is suitable and is not disturbed frequently.

And the color forms appearing are one of the fascinations of raising one's own plants. They may vary from pure white in the Christmas-rose through pinky green to a very fine claret in the Lenten-rose.

These two Hellebores like a partially shaded position for the summer months but more sunlight in winter.

This can be arranged by planting on a southeast site, or where overhead tree branches provide shade around noon in summer, yet where the low noon sun in winter reaches the plants.

The large leaves resent wind, particularly the north-east of winter, for they are partially evergreen and help in providing food supplies for early bud development below ground.

Christmas-rose will bloom at any time from November through March.

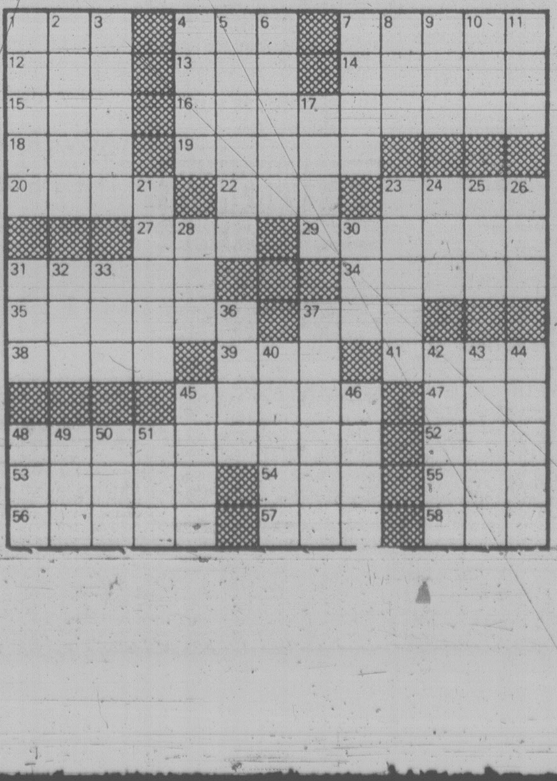
Answer to yesterday's puzzle.



Trial delayed

The trial of seven men accused of conspiracy to import 13½ tons of Colombian marijuana into Canada by ship near Tofino last July will not go ahead until late this year or early next year.

County court Judge Peter Millward set the matter over Thursday to Nov. 13 to fix a trial date for the men who have chosen trial by judge alone. An eighth man, Melville Douglas Balfour, 31, of Lasqueti Island, earlier had his trial date set for Aug. 20 but this may now also be changed.

Reason for the delay is to await the B.C. Court of Appeal decision on a Crown appeal of the sentences given four men convicted in the same episode by a jury in April and a fifth man acquitted of one charge but subsequently charged with three offences.

The seven men are Robert Sherman Miller, 33, Gordon Barlow Tait, 32, and Frederick MacKintosh Tait, 35, — all of North Vancouver; Terrence Gerard Trainor, 28, of Langley; Kevin Gerard Gushue, 26, of Surrey; Neil Maxwell Kennedy, 26, of Oshawa, and Lino Colatosti, 36, also known as Allen Valenti, of Qualicum.

The 15 were charged after what police described as $20 million worth of marijuana was found on Obstruction Island in Shelter Inlet.

Colombia's crime crackdown stemming flow of drugs to U.S.

By CHARLES KRAUSE

BOGOTA (WP) — Colombia has begun what appears to be its first serious attempt to crack down on criminal activity — from drug-running to counterfeiting — that is having a direct impact on the United States.

Since his inauguration last August, President Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala has placed the Guajira Peninsula, which juts into the Caribbean and has long served as a major shipment point for marijuana and cocaine, under the jurisdiction of Colombia's armed forces. American officials say the move has, for the first time, begun to disrupt the flow of narcotics to the United States.

The Turbay government also has allowed U.S. Secret Service agents into Colombia for the first time as part of an effort by the F-2, this country's version of the FBI, to stop counterfeiting rings that have operated freely here until now.

A raid last week, the third in recent months, netted more than $4 million in bogus dollar and peso notes as well as false passports and travellers checks.

The Treasury Department estimates that about 90 per cent of all the counterfeit dollars manufactured abroad that successfully reach the United States come from Colombia, which over the past two years has probably become the world's leading producer of bogus currency, according to American officials here.

It is drugs, however, that remain Colombia's most important illicit export — worth an estimated $500 million to $1 billion a year. It is estimated that 85,000 acres, mostly in the Guajira, produce about 35,000 tons of marijuana a year.

The General Accounting Office has said Colombia is by far the most important source for both cocaine and marijuana entering the United States.

While Turbay's efforts thus far have not even come close to stopping the vast drug trade that has flourished in Colombia since the early 1970s, the military campaign in the Guajira has achieved substantial results, according to U.S. officials.

Approximatly 3,500 tons of marijuana, worth an estimated $70 million to Colombian drug runners and about $280 million when finally sold in the United States, have been seized. About 1,000 Colombians and Americans have been arrested in the Guajira, and 65 to 70 airplanes and an equal number of ships engaged in drug smuggling operations have been captured.

The Guajira peninsula is a rugged, mountainous region populated largely by Indians clinging to an ancient pre-Columbian culture. The valleys and villages are home to recent migrants and peasants who left southern Colombia to escape the civil strife of 1949-58. Such services as sewage, health care and running water are rare, and transportation outside the towns is virtually impossible.

Col. Miguel Maza Marquez, commander of the F-2, said last week that his efforts to stop cocaine traffic in Colombia have resulted in the destruction of 119 cocaine laboratories, the seizure of 2,639 kilos of cocaine and the destruction of 19,547 kilos of coca paste headed for laboratories to be turned into granules of cocaine.

In all, Maza said the F-2 has arrested 1,069 Colombians and 151 foreigners in connection with the cocaine raids.

Because Colombian law enforcement officials have been so corrupted by drug money, however, there can be no guarantee that all or even most of the marijuana and cocaine seized has been destroyed. Nor can there be any guarantee that those arrested in the drug raids have been kept in jail and tried — because it is still relatively easy to bribe authorities here to secure freedom from prosecution, according to diplomatic sources.

Nonetheless, American officials say that Turbay, who was stung by charges in the United States that members of his family are engaged in the drug trade, has demonstrated since he assumed office that he is determined to co-operate with the United States in trying to stop the drug trafficking.

The Carter administration has offered Turbay $2.5 million this fiscal year to aid in the drugs battle. The money is being used to provide rations of 6,500 soldiers now involved in the operation under the command of Gen. Jose Villareal.

The United States is also installing two radar units in the area to monitor airplanes that regularly land at clandestine airstrips, pick up their cargoes of "Santa Marta gold" and then return to remote landing strips in the United States.

The Colombian government has said it reserves the right to shoot down any plane entering its airspace illegally. The government here has also announced a three-month study to determine whether it should begin spraying marijuana fields with paraquat, a poisonous herbicide used successfully in Mexico.

Despite the military takeover of the Guajira, the area is still known as a no-man's-land where local "mafiosos," as those involved in the drug trade are called, have great influence — either as a result of bribery or the guns they wield.

During the first three months of this year, there were 240 murders in Santa Marta alone, the capital of the province which encompasses the Guajira peninsula. Most of the murders are thought to be drug-related.

Despite his public statements, there are those in the Guajira who believe Turbay's campaign against drug traffickers is aimed principally at the peasants who grow marijuana and at minor drug dealers who buy and sell relatively small quantities.

Few of the really big-time "captains" of the drug-running trade have been arrested, according to several sources here, although their identities are well known.

Turbay and the "traditional families" that have long dominated Colombian econmic and political life seem to have reached agreement that the "mafiosos" and the money they command have not only given Colombia a very bad international image but, more importantly, threaten the hold the traditional oligarchy has long enjoyed here.

Stories abound of rich "mafiosos" buying apartments and real estate in Bogota as well as hotels, banks and soccer teams throughout the country. They apparently also have begun to strongly influence politicians. The traditional families are said to be worried that the drug runners, with their vast resources, may one day control the country.

Italy bans charters from U.K.

ROME (Reuter) — Italy imposed an immediate ban on all British charter flights today following the refusal by Mobil Oil of Britain to refuel an Italian charter airliner at London's Gatwick Airport Thurday.

The decision to revoke landing rights for British charter flights for an indefinite period was announced by Italy's aviation authority, Civilavia.

A DC-9 airliner of the Italian charter Itavia Company has been stranded at Gatwick Airport since Thursday morning. It was due to fly British tourists to Italy.

Refuelling was refused because the airliner had already consumed the fuel it was due under reduced quotas for June.

The Civilavia ban was thought to be unprecedented between members of the European Economic Community and informed sources in Rome said Civilavia took the decision without consulting the Italian foreign ministry.

Vancouver bank staffer cited in L.A. fraud case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted an English citizen on charges of wire fraud and conspiracy to fraudulently transport Canadian money to a Los Angeles bank.

Barry Berenbaum, 49, was charged Wednesday with conspiring with Louise Baxter, 32, of Vancouver, to make an unauthorized wire transfer of $2.8 million to Crocker National Bank in Los Angeles from a Vancouver branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

The indictment said Baxter was an employee of the Bank of Nova Scotia and had access to the bank's daily access code for inter-bank money transfers.

She was named as an unindicted co-conspirator and is being prosecuted by Canadian authorities, said attorney Donald Etra, who presented the case to the grand jury.

Berenbaum is also charged with wire fraud for telephoning Los Angeles from Vancouver to arrange the transfer.

Self-defence planned in trespassing case

SEATTLE (UPI) — A U.S. federal court Thursday set a trial date of Aug. 6 for 10 Canadians arrested earlier this month for trespassing at the American Navy's nuclear-submarine base at Bangor, Wash.

The nine men and one woman were released from federal custody June 11, the day after they allegedly threw rugs across the top of a fence and climbed onto the base to protest the use of nuclear weapons.

The Canadians were members of a Vancouver-based group called the Pacific Life Community.

U.S. District Judge Walter T. McGovern will preside at the trial for the protesters, who have said they will act as their own attorneys and present a defence based on the contention that certain illegal acts are necessary to prevent a greater harm from occurring.

Skull cut down to size

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Surgeons removed the skull of a six-year-old New Brunswick girl whose head had swollen to the size of a 35-pound watermelon and rebuilt it in a rare operation that reduced it to near normal.

Laurie Montgomery of Flatlands, N.B., was listed in critical condition at Tampa General Hospital on Thursday. But doctors said she is responding well.

"We took the skull completely off and reconstructed it smaller," said plastic surgeon Mutaz Habal, one of two doctors guiding the University of South Florida medical team in the delicate 14-hour operation. It was performed last Friday but details were not made known until Wednesday.

Laurie suffers from hydrocephalus, commonly known as water on the brain. In normal babies, fluid is produced to cushion and nourish the brain and tiny pathways form to drain the fluid off. In Laurie, the pathways did not develop.

Her head grew to 93 centimetres in circumference. It was too heavy for her to hold up and left the child pinned to a bed most of the time. Doctors held out little hope.

The girl's father, Thomas Montgomery, said he said he and his wife Arlene first sought treatment in Canada but were told it was futile. They refused to give up, he said, "although that was the advice to give up and forget about her."

Neurosurgeon Jack Maniscalco, who worked with Habal in the surgery, said: "She won't be out of the woods until about two weeks after the operation. But she is better."

The operation was the second of its kind that Habal and Maniscalco have performed. They did their first one two years ago at Shands Teaching Hospital at the University of Florida in Gainesville.

That patient was a six-year-old boy who now is reported to be developing naturally. A Canadian doctor who heard of that case referred the Montgomerys to the Tampa team.

In Laurie's case, Habal removed her skull in pieces and Maniscalco says he "literally deflated her brain" by removing the fluid.

Then Habal built a scaffolding from pieces of skull. On that bony framework, he refitted other pieces, moving some around and reducing the size of others until he had reshaped her head giving her a normal appearance from the front and top.

The back of her head is still larger than normal and Maniscalco said a second operation will be necessary in about six months to correct that.

Once the shaping was done, Maniscalco reattached the brain and its protective covering to the "new" skull and reinflated it with fluid.

Laurie's release is not expected for about 30 to 40 days.

Asbestos firm seeks injunction

MONTREAL (CP) — Asbestos Corp. Ltd. filed a request today with the Quebec Superior Court asking for an interlocutary injunction prohibiting the Quebec government from expropriating the company until the enabling law has been tested in the courts.

The Quebec national assembly adopted a bill to allow the expropriation of the company's assets Wednesday.

In a statement, Asbestos Corp. said the company asked for the injunction to remain in effect until this law and another law, adopted in May, 1978, setting up the provincial National Asbestos Corp., have both been tested in the courts.

'Quick-strike' force urged

By GEORGE WILSON and JIM HOAGLAND

WASHINGTON (WP)— The U.S. Army is drafting plans for a new "quick-strike" force of 110,000 troops to respond to crises in the Persian Gulf or other hot spots outside of NATO, Gen. Bernard Rogers said Thursday.

In a farewell news conference as Army chief of staff, Rogers explained that the "Unilateral Corps" would consist of the 82nd Airborne and other units already established that are not committed to fighting a North Atlantic Treaty Organization war.

The Unilateral Corps is the Army's answer to President Carter's desire for a specialized force for conflicts in the Third World. The Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps will have units assigned to the Unilateral Corps, Rogers said.

Rogers, who is leaving his job to succeed Gen. Alexander Haig as NATO commander, said that the corps would be a "go-anywhere" force rather than one specifically targeted on the Persian Gulf or any other area.

Despite Rogers; declaration that the force would not be specifically targeted on the Persian Gulf and Middle East, creation and use of the force are major topics on the agenda of a secret two-part White House review of U.S. policy in the Middle East that began yesterday, administration sources said.

The State Department, which chaired Thursday's opening session of the cabinet-level Policy Review Committee, is reportedly opposed to any large increase in the U.S. military presence in or targeted on the Middle East.

After considering diplomatic and political options Thursday, the committee is due Friday to take up military options. Friday's session is to be chaired by Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

"There has been no decision to deploy such a force," State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said. "We are aware of planning on a contingency basis."

Oil-producing countries in the Persian Gulf have reacted sharply to public discussion of U.S. capability to intervene in that region to keep oil flowing to the industrialized world.

Army leaders said the idea for the Unilateral Corps, is to give the unified commanders, such as the commander in chief for the Pacific, a force they can call upon for help without going through the time-consuming process of identifying and rounding up available units.

The Army plan, still on paper, does not envision assembling the corps at one place. Instead, the combat troops and support units would stay where they are. They would be equipped to respond as a corps in a hurry, however.

Native craft auction sets world records

LONDON (Reuter) — Two world auction records were set at Sotheby's Thursday for African and American Indian art in a $2.1 million sale of primitive works.

A Master of Buli wood stool from Luba, Zaire, in the form of a woman holding the seat, was bought by New York's Metropolitan Museum for $480,000, a record for African art, Sotheby's said.

Belgian guilty of raping wife

BRUSSELS (AP) — An appeals court overturned a lower court decision Thursday and declared that a 25-year-old grocery store clerk was guilty of raping his wife.

The three-judge panel ruled that rape is an act of violence whether or not the two persons involved are married.

A local Brussels court had cleared Bruno De Ridder of rape but convicted him of assault after hearing testimony that he forced his wife, Lisette, to have sexual intercourse with him repeatedly between March, 1976, and December, 1977. Testimony shows that De Ridder beat his wife and tied her to a bed.

The lower court, in its March 5 ruling on the rape charge, agreed with a defence argument that by not submitting to intercourse with her husband, the wife was neglecting her marital responsibilites.

In overturning that decision, the appeals court said that by marrying a man, a woman "agrees to have intimate relations" but the husband does not have the right to force her into intercourse.

Israeli Golan bid slammed

CAIRO (Reuter) — Egypt accused Israel on Thursday of obstructing peace efforts by deciding to set up a regional council in the occupied Golan Heights.

The council would include representatives from Israeli settlements and would belong to the Israeli interior ministry, Egypt's official Middle East News Agency said.

The agency quoted a foreign ministry source — a device frequently used by the Cairo government to issue its views without a formal statement — as saying Jerusalem's move is "a new proof of continued Israeli violation of the principles of international law."

The source was quoted as saying: "Egypt condemns these Israeli measures which contradict the real wish to establish peace in the Middle East."

The source also said the Israeli measure is contrary to Camp David, Md., accords concluded between Egypt and Israel last September with the help of the United States.

Any attempt on the part of Israel to perpetuate its "illegal occupation of Arab lands is a continuation of its attempts to place obstacles on the road of a comprehensive and just settlement," the added.

40 Syrian cadets die in 'massacre'

BEIRUT (AP) — More than a dozen gunmen, including an "Israeli spy" and a Syrian army captain, massacred 40 cadets at the Syrian military academy in Aleppo last week, the rightist Voice of Lebanon radio reported here today.

It said which dozens of students were "wounded or disfigured" in the attack.

There was no immediate Syrian government comment on the report.

The broadcast quoted the Syrian government newspaper Al-Jamahir in Aleppo, in northern Syria, as saying authorities have offered a reward for the capture of the 12 men the newspaper said plotted and helped carry out the academy massacre.

U.S. troops for Nicaragua?

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's spokesman today refused to rule out the possibility of using U.S. troops in strife-torn Nicaragua.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said the government is consulting with other members of the Organization of American States on the question of a role for U.S. military forces in the Central American state.

Asked whether the troops might be introduced in a peace-keeping role there, Powell told reporters:

"That is a matter on which we are consulting among our friends in the OAS and we will be guided by those consultations and the needs of the situation."

Pressed for more details, the press secretary reread his answer from a prepared statement and refused to go beyond it.

Powell spoke as the OAS was trying to decide whether there is a consensus in support of a surprise U.S. call for an end to the Somoza rule in Nicaragua.

A seven-state working group was named Thursday night to try to work out a resolution acceptable to a two-thirds majority of the 27-member regional organization. The delegates were working from a draft resolution presented by the United States.

OAS foreign ministers met for four hours Thursday and it was apparent sentiment against President Anastasio Somoza was running high.

Another meeting was scheduled today.

U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance opened the deliberations Thursday with a call for the "replacement of the present government with a transitional government of national reconciliation."

The five-state Andean Pact said no solution is possible without the "definitive exclusion of the Somoza regime."

Panama said it was recognizing a five-member government council announced last weekend by the Sandinista guerrilla movement. Earlier, at Panama's request, film footage was shown to the delegates of the murder Wednesday of ABC reporter Bill Stewart at the hands of a Nicaraguan national guard.

Other countries said the OAS should pursue a hands-off policy and allow the Sandinistas to achieve an outright military victory.

It was clear the spreading opposition to Somoza's rule in Nicaragua has led to a marked decline in his hemispheric support.

Equally clear, however, was the determination of some member states to abide by one of the organization's most hallowed principles: non-intervention.

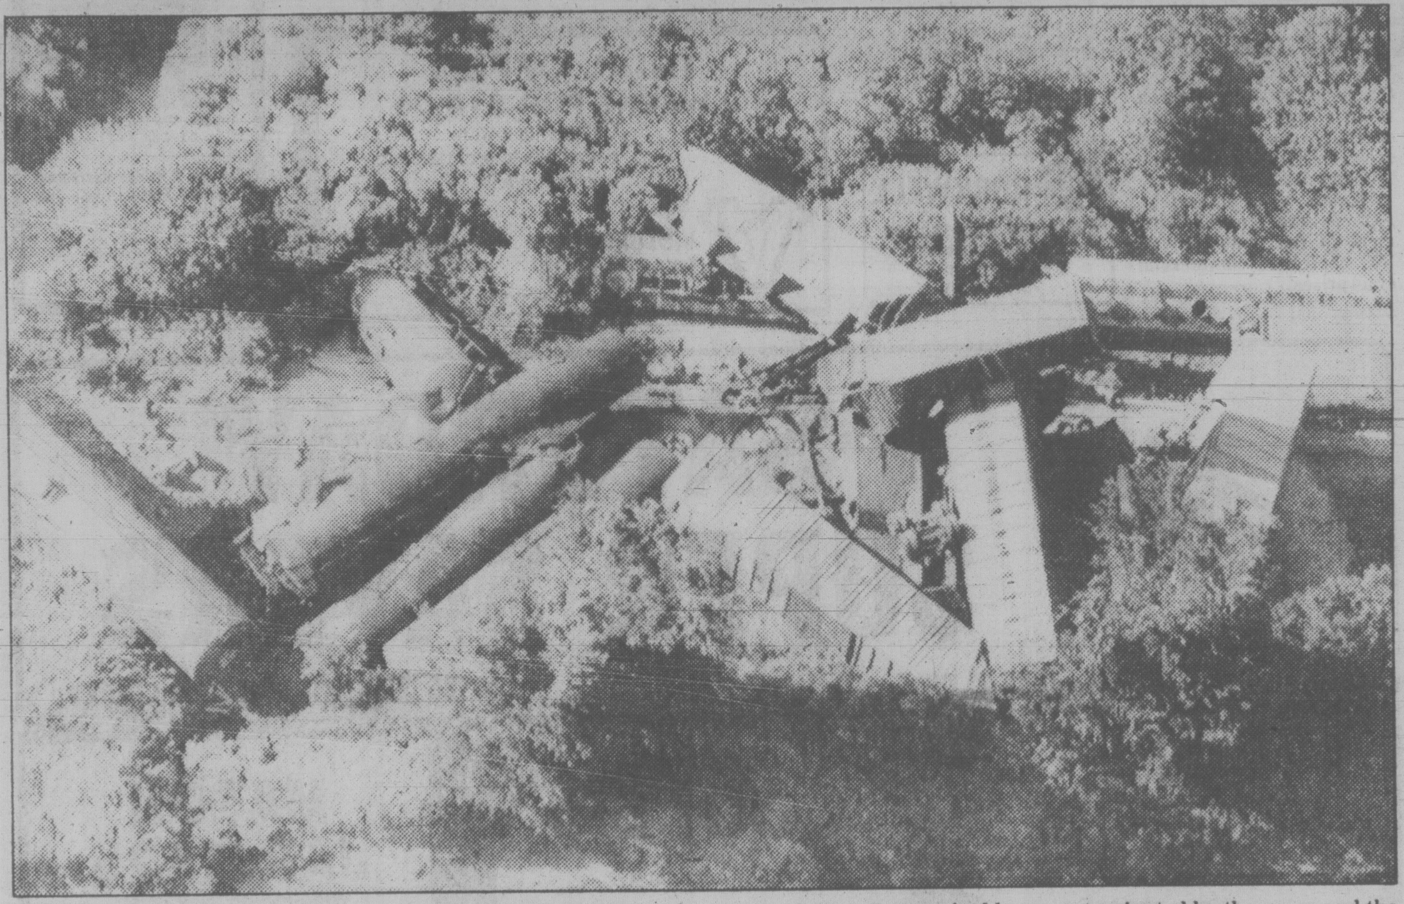
Mexico, for example, has been in the vanguard of anti-Somoza sentiment in the hemisphere. But Mexican Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda, reflecting his country's concerns about U.S. intentions, appealed against OAS intervention in Nicaragua.

Vance also proposed an immediate ceasefire, a cessation of arms shipments to both sides, the sending of an OAS delegation to Managua and the establishment of an OAS peacekeeping presence to help create a climate of peace.

In Managua, Somoza balked at the call for his resignation but said he was open to "a democratic way of solving" the civil war ravaging Nicaragua.

There was more heavy fighting between Somoza's troops and the Sandinista guerrillas in Managua's slum districts, but the guerrillas were reported slipping out of the barrios to fight somewhere else.

"I gave my answer to Vance a long time ago," said Somoza, who has vowed to stay in office until his term expires in 1981. "The same thing was said to me by Bowdler (special U.S. Ambassador William) Bowdler, and I proposed a plebiscite."



TWISTED WRECKAGE is strewn over area near Quebec town of West Brome, where CP Rail freight train collided Thursday with a transport truck, killing the driver. The collision cracked tank cars loaded with propane gas and alcohol which spilled into nearby Yamaka River. A police spokesman said the river, which flows through West Brome, had been contaminated by the gases and the 23,000 residents of Cowansville, about eight kilometers to the west, had been advised not drink from local water supplies because reservoire's may have been contaminated. About 150 residents were evacuated at the time of the crash.

Quiet switch lets ICBC sue drunks

The Insurance Corp. of B.C. is now holding drivers impaired by alcohol or drugs responsible for injury claims.

Such practice has been common with private insurance firms for years.

But ICBC, with cabinet approval, made the change in its coverage without telling anyone.

In a quiet move that began this insurance year, March 1, ICBC changed the regulations enabling it to collect court awards from drivers in cases where they are impaired, under the influence of drugs, found guilty of criminal negligence or driving while under suspension.

As the law now stands, a driver with a blood-alcohol reading in excess of .08 could be held liable for all claims over the minimum $75,000 ICBC would pay.

Awards exceeding $1 million have not been uncommon in recent years.

Drivers could lose their homes, cars and entire assets to pay off claims.

Deputy premier Grace McCarthy, who is now the minister responsible for ICBC, said the cabinet order changing the regulations was approved last November.

The move came at the same time the new auto insurance rates were announced and she said it is

Oil firms get stiff warning

Times News Services

The top consumer affairs official of the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) has warned the oil companies they are "heading for nationalization" if they don't explain the present crisis soon and stop what she called "manipulative" practices.

The same official, Tina Hobson, director of consumer affairs for the DOE, has warned key DOE officials in a memorandum that there is also little or no reason that "consumers (shouldn't) believe DOE is misleading, misinforming or even lying to them about petroleum data."

"We are heading toward nationalization of the oil companies," Mrs. Hobson flatly told corporate consumer affairs representatives and government regulators from several areas.

"I don't want to go in that direction, but if the oil industry and the DOE don't come up with better rationing and something better than those gas lines, there won't be a choice in the matter," she added.

Mrs. Hobson said she had information that jobbers for the major oil companies were engaging in a "manipulative process of blackmailing gas station dealers" into staying open for only a limited number of hours and using only a limited number of pumps, "or else." She said dealers were being threatened with being cut off by those jobbers — their only suppliers — if they didn't heed the warnings.

Mrs. Hobson said she has gone to speak to several groups about the energy crisis lately, but in her most recent speech before consumer leaders, she said she was shouted down and not even allowed to speak. "People are getting impatient with us," she said.

Meanwhile, the White House announced plans today to end the federal rule giving farmers priority in obtaining diesel fuel, apparently so it can be diverted to independent truckers.

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A light plane which smashed into a mountain near Zeballos last August killing four people had been written off as a total loss eight years earlier after a crash in Florida.

Investigators have learned that the aircraft — which lost a wing in mid-flight seconds before the fatal B.C. crash — was re-built after the Florida accident and sold in Canada with a certificate of airworthiness that did not show the aircraft had a crash history.

The federal Ministry of Transport (MOT) probe into the Zeballos crash has cast grave doubts about the manner in which planes imported into Canada are deemed safe and airworthy.

While a report on the crash of the Helio Courier aircraft is not expected to be made public until early next month, the Times has learned investigators discovered the plane's certificate of airworthiness issued in the U.S. had been falsified.

The discovery has brought into question the ministry's decades-old practice of accepting American certificates at face value in issuing certificates for Canada.

A spokesman for the air accident investigation branch said in an interview from Ottawa the certificate for the Helio failed to mention a major previous accident, an omission that proved to have deadly consequences.

The single-engine aircraft, operated by Tradewinds Aviation of Vancouver, crashed into the side of a 3,000-metre mountain about 56 kilometres west of Zeballos shortly after taking off from Tahsis on Aug. 15, 1978.

All four persons on board including the pilot, William Merrill, and passengers Albert Gurschler, William Peter and Clifford Peel, were killed.

Subsequent investigations carried out by the MOT revealed that the same plane had crashed into a tree in Florida in 1970, shearing a wing, and had been written-off by insurance adjusters as a total loss.

The wreckage was placed in storage until 1976 when the American owner, whose identity is not known, decided to try to repair the damage.

The Helio factory in the U.S., however, refused to authorize any repairs or provide parts unless the work was done in the factory or at the scene by a qualified, factory-trained mechanic.

Nevertheless the repairs went ahead, with parts apparently taken from a couple of junk Helios that had been in previous crackups.

The plane was repainted and sold to Staron Flight, a small, Vancouver-based charter firm.

A coroner's jury, convened in Tahsis on Jan. 31, found that the port wing fell off in

N-plant spews more radiation

PEACH BOTTOM, Pa. (AP) — An uncontrolled release of radiation was reported today at the Peach Bottom nuclear power plant, but company and federal officials disagreed on its severity.

It was the second time in two days that radioactive gas leaked from one of the plant's stacks.

"There was another release of radiation in the early-morning hours," said Karl Abraham, spokesman for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

"Yesterday's was six per cent over technical specifications (federal limits), and today's was 16 per cent over technical specifications," he said.

But Neil McDermott, spokesman for Philadelphia Electric Co., which operates the York County plant, denied today's radiation release exceeded federal limits although he conceded Thursday's did.

'Unlimited scope' for BCRIC

The B.C. Resources Investment Corp. (BCRIC) is one of the biggest corporations in Canada in the terms of capitalization and has borrowing power of about $2 billion, BCRIC president David Helliwell said Thursday.

"We now have unlimited scope in terms of what we can do with the corporation," Helliwell told a Vancouver news conference in announcing that BCRIC has received gross proceeds of $414.7 million from B.C. residents who applied by the June 15 deadline to purchase 69,126,905 shares in the corporation.

BCRIC shares will appear for trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange on Aug. 7 and Helliwell said he expected the shares would have a book value of about $6.75 initially.

He said the trust funds are now invested in the short-term money market and "are doing alright in the area of 11 per cent" return.

"The response has been absolutely staggering and we've been overwelmed by the number of applications for both the free shares and the share offering.

"This has transformed the corporation into the very, very big leagues and just sends shivers up my spine."

Helliwell said BCRIC directors don't have an investment strategy mapped out yet and any suggestions would be speculative.

Figures released Thursday were not final, Helliwell said, because there is a backlog of applications which have not been processed after a rush by investors before the purchase deadline.

Helliwell said that, as of June 20, 1,821,302 B.C. residents had applied for their five free shares, totalling 9,106,510 shares.

The number of persons applying for 100 or more of the additional shares — to become registered shareholders in the corporation — was more than 110,000.

"I guess you could say that we're cash-rich and relatively poor in holdings at the present time," Helliwell said. "We'll be advising our shareholders this summer on what we intend to do with our cash pool."

The corporation had holdings of $151 million when the provincial government announced its share offering. Combined with the gross proceeds already received, BCRIC now has a value of at least $565 million.

Helliwell said the corporation's share offering has received twice the support of any similar offering ever be-

Coal-to-Romania development's enviromental effect queried

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A sprawling open-pit coal mining development planned in northeastern B.C. could be an environmental nightmare, says the government biologist for the area.

Fred Harper, biologist with the provincial fish and wildlife department in Fort. St. John, said in a telephone interview Thursday that announcement of the development caught him by surprise — especially as the company has yet to file the second part of a required environmental impact report.

Quintette Coal Ltd. announced Wednesday it had signed a deal to sell Romania up to 30 million tonnes of metallurgical coal over a 20-year period from its property east of McLeod Lake, about 95 kilometres northeast of both Dawson Creek and Chetwynd.

The mining development will be accompanied by construction of a new town of between 5,000 and 10,000 people at Tumbler Ridge as well as new railway and road connections.

Harper said that by law coal mine developers must submit a preliminary report outling the project, environmental impact and reclamation procedures. This report must be followed by another adding more detail and filling in the gaps.

"Normally this has to be submitted for approval," Harper said. "I haven't seen it."

Harper said the 100,000-acre Quintette property lies around Babcock Mountain, east of the Sukunka River drainage basin.

TOWN TALK

While the price of gas in B.C. has risen an average of 53 per cent in the past five years, a survey undertaken by the B.C. Automobile Association shows motorists are still getting a relatively good deal.

The provincial average of 21.5 cents a litre is below that of the U.S. — 24.3 cents — and well down from most other nations in the world.

In France, for instance, a litre costs 74 cents, in Belgium 64 cents, the Netherlands and Switzerland 62 cents, Japan 61 cents, England 45 cents and Austria 40 cents.

On the other hand, motorists in Mexico pay only 14 cents.

The survey pointed out gas prices have increased in B.C. only three per cent in the past five months while they've shot up 16.5 per cent in the U.S.

Prince George has the highest average gas prices in the province at 22.7 cents. Chilliwack offers the best deal with an average litre price of 20.8 cents. In Greater Vancouver the average is 21 cents; in Victoria 21.3 cents.

All prices are quoted in Canadian currency and are for regular gas.

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory returned from Europe this week convinced Victoria's traffic conditions are cinchy compared to European cities, such as Rome.

One of the hats Gregory wears is that of president of the Victoria Rotary Club and he told his fellow Rotarians on Thursday that Roman taxi drivers have to be the worst in the world.

The only pedestrians in Rome he quipped "are the quick and the dead."

JOLI
. . . dope runner

West Coast yatching circles may have wondered in recent years what became of the sleek Seattle yatch Joli.

Well, wonder no more.

The Joli, which won its division in the 1976 Swiftsure and until two years ago held the record for fastest time on the Victoria to Maui Trans Pacific race, is now the property of the U.S. government.

The 61-foot sloop was seized by the U.S. Coast Guard and customs following a 37-ton marijuana bust on the freighter Helena Star off Cape Flattery on April 17, 1978.

Investigators said the Joli was being used as a runner vessel bringing the marijuana in to a shore base when the operation was interrupted by the arrival of the Coast Guard.

More than $2 million had been spent in the operation and included the purchase of prime waterfront property at Sequim, a tug, barge, and numerous other smaller vessels besides the Joli.

Well-known Victoria sailing photographer Jim McVie says that notwithstanding the notoriety the Joli has received, the vessel's loss has been a blow to racing.

"It's a crime it's left the racing scene," he says.

In a story Friday to kick off the Times' Walk of the Week series we mentioned that a must for a regular hiker is a talking stick.

Somehow the explanation of what a talking stick is got lost along the way.

A talking stick differs from a walking stick in that it's bigger, more like a Boy Scout staff in size, and is usually quite a bit sturdier.

Talking sticks — the name was given to them by native Indians — used to feature fancy carvings and the like.

However, for Walk of the Week purposes, any shoulder-high wooden staff will do nicely.

Victoria Shriner Roy Comrie was singled out for special mention the other day for the part he played in getting a Nanaimo boy promptly to the Shriner's burn treatment centre in Galveston, Tex., in April.

The boy, 10-year-old Trevor Zado, has returned home after treatment for second and third-degree burns received when he threw lawnmower gasoline on a fire and flames set his nylon jacket ablaze.

He was first brought to the intensive care burn unit at Victoria General Hospital, then the Victoria and Nanaimo Shrine Clubs arranged to get Trevor on a plane to Texas.

Thanks to Capt. Dick Okros, chief of staff readiness, maritime command Pacific, the ancient Anglican church at the Haida Indian village in Masset in the Queen Charlotte Islands has its stained glass wibdow above the altar restored to its original splendor.

A couple of years ago Okros was in Masset to inspect a sea cadet corps. Having some time to spare, he was given a tour of the village by Rev. John Mackenzie, minister of St. John the Evangelist Church.

The window was in pieces, having been destroyed by vandals.

Okros promised to get it restored but it was too complicated a job for CFB Esquimalt.

Instead, ships' crews and shore personnel divvied up $1,200 between them and M.C. Nuttgens of Cobble Hill restored the window to its original beauty.

The window, originally installed in 1890, marks the conversion to Christianity of Chief Stielta, the first Haida chief to become a Christian.

Tommy's gold pass real clinker

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

After 50 years at the Empress Hotel, Tommy Johnson was looking forward to retirement.

One of the nice things he anticipated was the gold pass CP Rail handed out to employees after a half century of service.

Johnson knows of only two others in Canada who have the pass, which used to entitle the bearer and family to unlimited free CP Rail travel.

He was given the pass and a gold watch amid farewell speeches at a party in the hotel May 1.

Several days later he found out the special pass, along with all other passes to retired CP hotel employees, would be discontinued June 15.

"Why did they make such a big to-do about giving me this pass if they knew it was no good?" Johnson asks.

He said he is not blaming the hotel, but he is mad at CP Rail for ruining his plans to visit relatives across Canada.

Members of the Retired Employees Association of Canadian Pacific Services on Vancouver Island also are angry with CP Rail, which owns shipping, rail and truck lines and a hotel chain.

President Barry Parsons said pass privileges were withdrawn from all but railway employees, effective June 15.

The cancellation is a tremendous blow because the passes are the only chance many pensioners have to travel.

Pensioners have earned the privileges after 20 or 30 years service and withdrawing them is pretty shabby treatment, he feels.

"In the last years of their lives they hoped to be able to visit their families."

Parsons has written protest letters to CP Rail headquarters in Montreal, the railway workers union, Esquimalt-Saanich MP Don Munro and Defence Minister Allan McKinnon, the MP for Victoria.

So far he's received sympathy from the MPs and no response from CP Rail.

And Johnson, who made plans with his wife to take an extended trip to Quebec, Toronto and Halifax, doesn't know what he will do now.

He still wants to travel by train, even if he has to pay for the trip, but faces a dilemma.

Werner won't bow to Queen

A Victoria man who can't become a Canadian citizen because he won't swear allegiance to Queen Elizabeth is glad his story is generating a lot of publicity.

Werner Willi Heib has been talking to newspapers, television and radio reporters from as far away as Toronto since a recent federal court ruling that the oath is a requirement of the Citizenship Act.

It's time the "archaic" act is changed, according to the 39 year-old machinist who lives at 3165 Pearkes.

Swearing loyalty to the Queen of England should not be a requirement for becoming a Canadian, Heib said today.

"But that seems to be the most important question. It doesn't matter if you're honest or hardworking."

Heib, who moved here from West Germany 18 years ago, said he will never swear to something he doesn't believe.

Standing up for his principles has cost Heib the right to vote and excludes him from a number of jobs, including government employment.

He is surprised the issue is getting so much attention and hopes his story will encourage other people to speak up.

Many people who take the oath do so against their personal beliefs because the sacrifice is too great if they refuse, Heib said.

He said he has a good job and will continue to stick to his beliefs as long as his family is not suffering.

His application for citizenship last year was turned down because he balked when asked to repeat the oath of alligiance.

"It would have been a lie."

Warning given motorists going south

If you are going by car to Seattle or thereabouts this weekend, you may have trouble getting gas on Sunday and any time after noon on Saturday.

A spokesman for the American Automobile Association in Seattle said today most gas stations along Highway 5, in Seattle and Everett will be closed Sunday.

In Bellingham, half will close at 3 p.m.

On Saturday, 70 per cent of the Everett area stations will close at 10 a.m., 77 per cent of the Seattle stations at noon and most of the Bellingham gas stations by 5:30 p.m.

The AAA spokesman said the figures are general and may not cover all stations along the highway between the major centres.

She said the closure situation is getting to be typical for the weekend.

Dash 7 planes on way

West Coast Air Holdings Ltd. of Vancouver has ordered three Dash 7 STOL planes and hopes to have at least one operating in B.C. within a year.

The short-takeoff-and-landing craft would be used on routes from Vancouver airport to various B.C. locations — including Victoria once a landing site is found.

President Lynn C. Thow said it might be several years before STOL craft operate on the Victoria-Vancouver route.

"We expect to go ahead soon on several of our routes but we will have to wait until the question of a landing strip is settled before we could operate into Victoria with STOL craft."

The company owns West Coast Air Services Ltd., which operates routes from Vancouver to Victoria, Bella Bella, Powell River plus various charter routes.

Thow said his company has applied to the air transport committee for permission to use the STOL planes on several of the routes.

The Dash 7s are manufactured by De Havilland at a price of about $5.5 million each.

One plane is due for delivery in 1980 and all three are to be delivered by 1982.

Thow said the STOL planes are ideal for remote areas where only small landing strips can be constructed.

Vancouver airport would continue to be the landing area for the Lower Mainland.

In Victoria the company has studied several possible sites for a landing strip, including the Work Point area but no decision has been made.

"We are waiting for Victoria to decide if and where they want a STOL landing strip. We are available to offer STOL service if Victoria wants it."

A downtown train station for Victoria came a step closer to reality Thursday when representatives from VIA Rail Canada Inc. endorsed the proposal.

Ald. Murray Glazier said today he spent the afternoon with Roger Spack, VIA's project manager for development from Montreal and Al Hammond, transportation manager from Winnipeg.

He said the two men met with regional district and city hall officials and indicated they were completely in support of a plan to move the Esquimalt and Nanaimo rail terminus to the city side of the Johnson Street bridge.

Glazier has been promoting the scheme that would see a new station built on Store at the intersection of Johonson.

The E&N now terminates its passenger runs at the station in Esquimalt.

"I was very pleased with the meeting," said Glazier. "It produced much more than expected . . . they said if the station was downtown now they'd start operating out of it tomorrow."

Glazier said there'd been some concern that VIA might not support the plan because traffic across the bridge is halted when the lift span is raised to allow vessels to pass.

But he said that problem can been overcome simply by co-ordinating marine traffic so that it doesn't pass the bridge at the times trains are due in and out.

Glazier said that because of VIA's endorsement the city will now work out details of the station, and after that begin to negotiate a cost sharing arangement for the project.

The provincial government, VIA and the city are all expected to share in the expenses.

Today's Markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The stock market was sharply higher in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Among industrials, Argus leaped ahead 3½ to $28½, Chrysler 3⅛ to $12¼, Noranda 1½ to $51¼, Westburne 1¼ to $47¾ and Gulf 1¼ to $63¼.

Dome Pete dropped 1⅝ to $49¼, Cadillac Fairview ¾ to $18¼ and Union Gas A ¼ to $11¼.

In mines, Hollinger A advanced three to $42⅜, McIntyre 1½ to $52 and United Siscoe 1¼ to $10⅜.

Among oils, Canadian Superior gained four to $148, Skye one to $7⅝ and Page ⅞ to $17⅞. Quasar down ½ at $12¼ and Numac ½ at $38.

Trading halts were called at the opening in Hudson's Bay Co., which last traded at $28½, and in Simpsons Ltd., which last traded at $3.25. The companies have been holding preliminary discussions on a possible merger.

A halt was also called in Maplex Management and Holdings Ltd., which last traded at $11, pending an announcement.

Trading was briefly halted in Asbestos Corp., which filed suit in Quebec Superior Court Friday to prevent its expropriation by the Quebec government. The stock was down ¾ to $45½.

New York

Analysts said the $2.6 billion decline in the money supply reported by the Federal Reserve late Thursday helped keep the rally going.

The drop eased fears, provoked by a record $6.9 billion increase the week before, that the Federal Reserve might soon tighten credit further.

Meanwhile, Wall Streeters were cautiously awaiting next Tuesday's meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to set pricing and production policies.

Bally Manufacturing, which holds a dominant position in the slot-machine market, fell 2 to $41⅞ after a 2½-point drop Thursday. New Jersey authorities ruled that casinos in Atlantic City may not purchase more than half their slot machines from any single producer.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — Oil shares were firmer while most other industrials were easier at the close of moderate trading.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 476.0, up 1.1.

Government stocks were easier despite firmness in the sterling, with long dates losing up to ¼ point.

Mauler from Mabou

TROUBADOUR John Allan Cameron, hosts his own unique music and variety series this summer on CBC television, beginning Friday, June 29 at 9 p.m. That's John in the fighting pose and he also gets into sports such as hockey, football, judo and tennis week by week. John Allan fancies himself an athlete and each program, between songs, faces some of Canada's best athletes in a free-wheeling contest. The "mauler" from Mabou, Nova Scotia, takes on all comers with surprising results.

Why people run

The escalating popularity of running is a phenomenon. Why do people run? Some of the reasons are revealed in Runners, an enlightening portrait of three Canadian running enthusiasts, to be seen on Wednesday, June 27 at 10:30 p.m. on CBC Television.

Runners contrasts the styles and philosophies of people who run for competition, rehabilitation or recreation, showing the quiet interludes, the intense effort and the moments of great personal satisfaction.

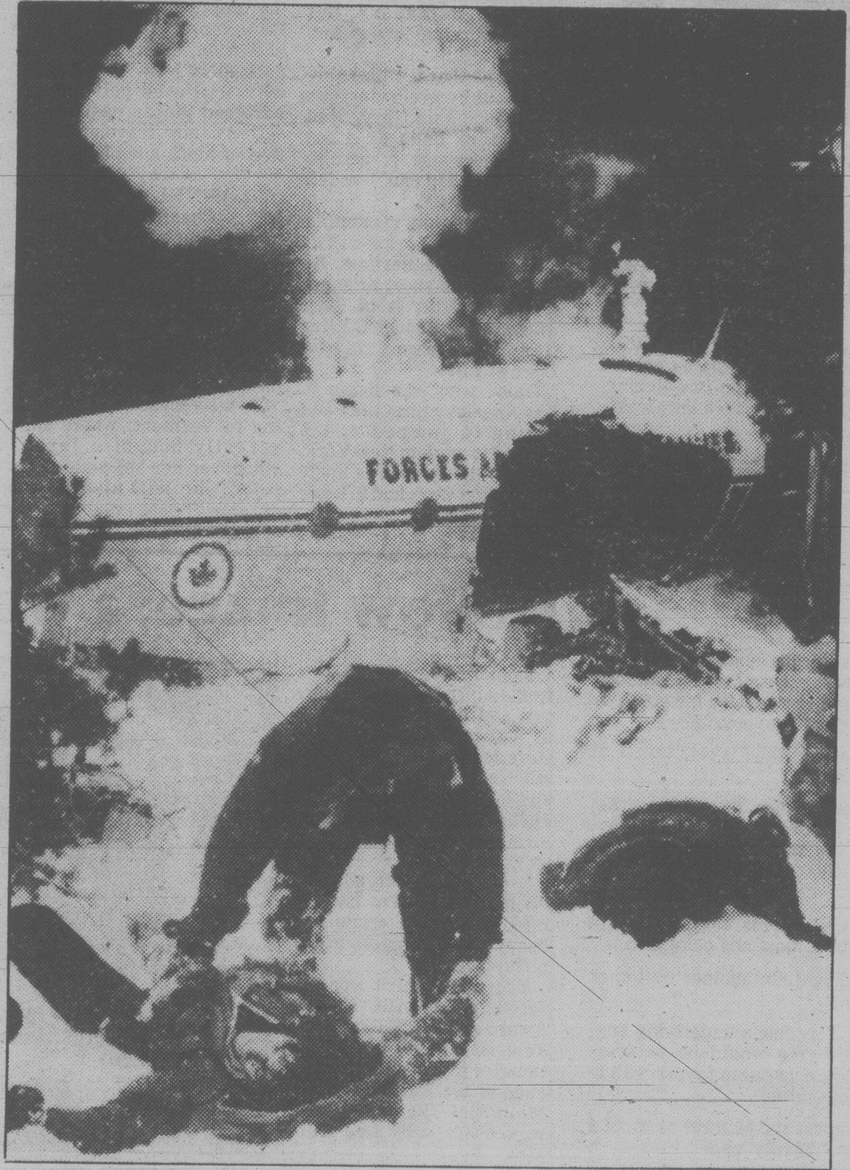
Accounting student, Paul Bannon, 25, is followed in his daily training program for the marathon and is shown competing in his second marathon race, the gruelling 26-mile test at the 1978 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton. He leads that race for several miles and finishes third for a Bronze Medal.

Plumbing supplies salesman, Bill McCourt, 43, runs for rehabilitation following a heart attack suffered in 1977. His running program, supervised by Dr. Terry Kavanagh of the Toronto Rehabilitation Centre, began with walking a mile in 20 minutes and has gradually been built up to running three miles a day.

Nursing instructor, Ruth Nesbitt, 37, runs four miles daily to "do something physical, stay in shape and feel better".

Labor: Rights At Work

CANADIAN LABOR gets a close look in the CBC documentary series Quarterly Report under host Barbara Frum. This program, to be telecast Sunday, June 24, at 9.30 p.m., is one of four reports a year on major issues affecting Canadians. Labor: Rights at Work looks at the Canadian labor movement at a time when more than a million workers are involved in collective bargaining for new contracts in the private sectors. The recent attempts by CLC President Dennis McDermott to recruit trade union support for the New Democratic Party in federal elections is one of the trends examined.



Hatred main enemy after northern crash

A military aircraft enroute to an isolated radio station north of Goose Bay crashes in the wilderness and only two men on board survive — two men who distrust and dislike each other.

This is the dramatic situation explored on The Fighting Men, the CBC Film Festival presentation Tuesday, June 26 at 9 p.m.

The two men must overcome their personal antagonism in order to overcome a greater threat — death by exposure and starvation — are a French-Canadian Air Force corporal named Jean-Claude Archambault, played by Robert Lalonde, and an English-Canadian Leading Seaman named Wayne Archer, played by Allan Royal.

Both have had a long-standing mutual loathing based on prejudices arising from their different linquistic and cultural backgrounds. When the plane crashes, Archambault suffers broken legs and Archer has his hands too badly burned to use. Their only way of surviving is to work together for the common good — if they can.

The Fighting Men (a CBC-TV drama first telecast in 1977) was written by Tony Sheer and directed by Don Shebib. John Trent is the producer.

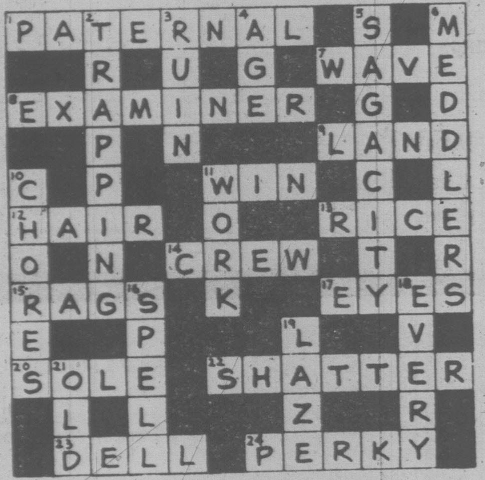
—PAYOFF PUZZLE—

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS

1. PATERNAL not maternal. The idea of "typical PATERNAL advice" is more convincing; it is less characteristically the role of a mother to advise a "young man" (so often that "in many cases, of course," it tends to be ignored).

7. WAVE not wake. Though children may indeed be full of beans in the morning, it is hardly a question of their "displaying animation" (who is watching, anyway?) at the particlar moment when they wake. Wade is not favored.

8. EXAMINER not examinee. The examinee is concerned with whether the test is too difficult for him, rather than with whether it is "reasonable" in a detached way.

9. LAND not hand. The clue suits something the person should seek to do for himself (i.e., LAND himself a job rather than expect someone else to do it for him).

12. HAIR not heir. A manis hardly concerned that his heir) 'son" would be nearer the mark) should look healtny, in the same way he may wish his HAIR to do so from normal pride in his appearance.

13. RICE not nice. As far as the child is concerned, at least, it isn't a nice pudding.

15. RAGS not rigs or rugs. Rather than being "not without their uses" in a general or speculative way, rugs have a distinct function. RAGS is a fully satisfactory answer. "Rigs," unqualified, tends to lack meaning.

17. EYES not dyes. The clue seems concerned with EYE colors. Dyes can be almost any color at all.

20. SOLE not some. Why should not another customer be given some attention?

22. SHATTER not scatter. The clue's underlying suggestion that one's objective would be to scatter/SHATTER the enemy if possible favors SHATTER more strongly than scatter.

23. DELL not doll. Unlike landscape pictures (e.g., of a DELL), doll photos are hardly understood as a "usual" sort of branch of photography. Also, a DELL, more necessarily than a doll has "beauty."

24. PERKY not jerky. Although possibly abrupt, a dance rhythm is termed, lively, PERKY, etc., and hardly attracts the disparaging term "jerky."

CLUE DOWN

2. TRAPPING not tramping. Tramping is simply walking; it is (rather than "involves") travelling around. TRAPPING involves going round tending the traps.
3. RUIN not rain. The clue seems to take it for granted that "this" is not wanted; however, ran may well be desired.
6. MEDDLERS not peddlers. MEDDLERS measure up better as persons who "concern themselves" with things, or make them their business. Peddlers simply sell small wares, normally.
10. CHORES not chorus. It is easier to believe that CHORES are simply mundane jobs requiring no talent. Chorus singing or dancing does use the talents involved.
11. WORK not word. The clue has two shots at a word meaning diminished ("shortened or curtailed") without hitting on "abbreviated," which would be the obvious choice for word.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Yet another love triangle

Throughout the history of soaps, the love triangle remains one of the most popular storylines. Love of Life once again partakes of this theme as Dr. Paul Graham vies with chef Tony Alphonso for the affection of the beautiful, but terribly vulnerable, Bambi Brewster.

Gary Giem, who plays Dr. Paul Graham on the popular soap, has only been with the show since January, but enjoys working in daytime TV.

"I know that it's probably been said by every daytime TV actor," said Gary, "but I've never been on a set where everyone is just so nice. Since day one, I've felt right at home."

Soap fans may remember Gary as Larry Larkin on The Young and the Restless. He was on just a short time but producer Cathy Abbi liked what she saw enough to offer Gary his present role on Love of Life.

Gary, who was living in Los Angeles at the time and hating it, jumped at the chance to work in New York. In fact, the move was made so fast that Gary had to leave without taking along Max, Auto, and Atilla, three parrots that he'd trained. Auto is the brightest of the trio. He hums the theme of Close Encounters of the Third Kind and whistles at himself in the mirror.

Later, in arranging for their transportation, Giem tries to buy them a seat on a flight to New York, but the airline insisted on shipping the birds with the baggage. Reluctantly, Gary agreed, and Auto, Max and Atilla arrived in New York along with well-used golf clubs, battered guitar cases, assorted canine travelers, and tons of multi-hued luggage.

CHANNEL CHATTER. Marie Cheatham's character of Stephanie Wyatt in Search for Tomorrow had a mastectomy and the actress has been invited to participate in luncheons sponsored by the American Cancer Society speaking about her role on the soap. Marie is also very busy these days, traveling to Vermont, where she recently bought a farm, whenever her schedule permits. She will also go to Houston, Texas, to visit her dad . . .

Another World, which is having its troubles in the ratings, boasts of the distinction of having not one, but two — count 'em — two Tony Award-winning directors. One is Jack Hofsiss, who recently picked up his coveted Tony for his direction of the Broadway play, The Elephant Man. The other prize-winning "World" director is Melvin Bernhardt, who last year collected his Tony for the direction of Da. Incidentially, both Elephant Man and Da also won the best play Tony . . .

Academy Award-winning actress Kim Hunter (she played Stella opposite Marlon Brando in Street Car Named Desire, both on the stage and in the film) joins Edge of Night in the role of Nola Madison, the alcoholic wife of a Hollywood mogul. Kim's first appearance in the soap is Tuesday, June 26 . . .

Search for Tomorrow travels to the Gulf of Mexico at Sarasota, Fla., for some beautiful location footage which will be seen throughout the summer months on the popular soap. The stars involved int the location jaunt are Sherry Mathis (Liza), Rod Arrants (Travis), Jerry Lanning (Nick D'Antoni), Lewis Arlt (David Sutton) and Megan Bagot (Laine Adamson).

PLOT PORTENTS. Left out in the cold after splitting with Chris, Mary appears vulnerable to the no-good Stephen on Days of Our Lives. Young Mellissa sizes up Stephen in a hurry. "Ezee-Cash" Carness is playing young Mike for a sucker in the loan shark business. The big question remains — can Laura pick up the pieces and her sanity? It's too early to say, but Laura's problems overshadow Julie's defacement, and that should be an encouraging note for Julie's fans.

Jill's senseless behavior regarding husband Stuart Brooks on The Young and the Restless has alienated brothers Snapper and Greg, as well as her mom. At least, Mom has drawn close to Jill's husband as a result of the pathetic marriage. With Kay Chancellor finally learning how to deal with wily Suzanne Lynch, where will Suzanne turn next? Watch out Derek, your ex is a viper hissing for new victims.

Tom struggles with his conscience and makes his choice between Poppy and Faith on Ryan's Hope. Delia tells all about Pat and Nancy's living arrangements to Maeve and Nancy's father, Dave Feldman. Meanwhile Rae and Seneca begin plotting to hold on to their respective lovers.

Hollow Image: a woman torn

Saundra Sharp stars as a woman torn between the luxury and dignity of her life as a successful department store buyer and the ties she still feels in her first love and her old neighborhood in Hollow Image, a new drama airing on Sunday, at 9 p.m. on Channel 4.

Saundra longs to go back "home" in Harlem but she repulsed by the crime and decay she encounters in her birthplace.

The play, which won the second annual ABC Theatre Award at the New Drama for Television Project at the National Playwrights Conference of the Eugene O'Neill Memorial Theatre Centre, was written by Lee Hunkins.

TV MAILBAG

WILD DAUGHTER — I know Robert Conrad's daughter was supposed to be on "The Wild, Wild West Revisited," which I greatly enjoyed, but I couldn't figure out who she was. Can you help? — Mrs. K. Mosger, Richmond, Va.

If you blinked you might have missed her. Conrad's daughter, Joan, actually played two brief parts. She was the Secret Service boss's (Harry Morgan) secretary, and was also one of the horsewomen seen from a distance in the segment where the assorted foreign agents come galloping towards Loveless's compound. Joan also supplied four of the horses used in the show.

TWIN TRAP — I want to know if it was one girl or twins in "World of Disney" show "The Parent Trap." Also, how old is she. Has she played in any other roles? — Susan Mannis, Dandridge, Tenn.

You were probably not even born when the actress of whom you speak began acting. Haley Mills, now 33, played both parts, through the wonders of split-screen photography. She began her film career in 1959 in "Tiger Bay." She won a special Oscar in 1960 for "Pollyanna," perhaps her most famous role. "The Parent Trap," was made the following year. She went on to make numerous motion pictures, both here and in her native England. You may know her sister, Juliet Mills, who was the nanny in "Nanny and the Professor."

WILD RYAN — I'm ready to kill my husband. He insists he saw Ryan O'Neal in the Western movie "The Wild Bunch." I say he's nuts. He says he vividly recalls O'Neal and William Holden in the movie together. I still say he's nuts. What do you say? — Karen Falson, Tri Cities, Wash.

I say he's not as nuts as you say he is. Ryan O'Neal was not in "The Wild Bunch," but he did co-star with William Holden in another bloody, but beautifully-photographed Western, "The Wild Rovers," which is where the confusion probably arose.

SHE'S TAKEN — Is Susan Anton married? I told my boyfriend that she was, so he'd stop falling all over the TV. But I don't really know for sure. — Cheryl Johnson, Lafayette, Calif.

Susan Anton is married to her manager, Jack Stein, who is also shorter than she is. But since when did that stop a man from falling over the TV set?

NAME THAT MacRAE — For some reason, I had it in my head that Meredith Birney Baxter, who plays on "Family," was Meredith MacRae, Sheila MacRae's daughter. I was recently told I was wrong. I would like to know if I am. — P.G., Bluffs, Ill.

Afraid so. First off, it's Meredith Baxter Birney. Secondly, Meredith MacRae is Meredith MacRae. As for Meredith Baxter Birney, she is the daughter of Whitney Blake, who played Dorothy Baxter on "Hazel" for many years. The Baxters get a bit confusing, but I think you'll be able to straighten it all out.

BATTLESTAR BOMB — Can you tell me if it's really true that ABC cancelled "Battlestar Galactica"? If so, Why? Also, is the movie based on the TV show, or is it new? — Freddie Lazer, Southeastern, Pa.

It really is true, Freddie. Despite your support, "Galactica" just didn't pull in the ratings necessary to warrant its enormous cost. The movie now making its way to neighborhood theatres is a strung-together assortment of series episodes. It's nothing fans of the series haven't already seen, only now it's in Sensurround.

TOP SHOWS — What shows have been consistently on top in the rating game? — K.V., Newburgh, N.Y.

Four weekly series, all on ABC, have been battling for first place throughout the season. They are "Mork and Mindy," "Three's Company," "Laverne and Shirley" and "Happy Days."

HOWDY — Remember the old "Howdy Doody Show?" Is it true that Clarabelle the Clown was played by Bob Keeshan, the guy who is better known today as "Captain Kangaroo?" — S.O., Danville, Calif.

For those into television trivia, Bob Keeshan played Clarabelle for five years before going on to the "Captain Kangaroo" Show.

By VERNON SCOTT

Steve Landesberg. . . prefers Manhattan

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Steve Landesberg, who plays the laconic, intellectual cop Dietrich, in the Barney Miller series is almost as laid back off screen as he is in the squad room on screen.

Bachelor Landesberg lives with Diana Canova, Judy's daughter, in a three-bedroom home in Encino, a posh section of the San Fernando Valley.

Diana, who costars in Soap, and Steve often drive to work together in the mornings inasmuch as their shows are taped side by side at the old Hollywood Columbia Studios.

Landesberg, a native New Yorker who would rather live in Manhattan than California, says he and Diana "probably will get married some day.

"I have a lot of trouble saying the word 'marriage.' It's tough to get out. But Diana has no trouble pronouncing the word at all."

Landesberg purchased the "modern country" hillside home last fall. Together the couple, with the help of a decorator, furnished the dwelling with antiques. They are especially fond of an enormous brass bed and a pair of 19th century walnut dressers in their bedroom.

"Our work schedules are compatible and so are we," Landesberg said. "Even when we don't go to work together. Diana gets in early for makeup and wardrobe. We usually go out for lunch every day."

Landesberg has a difficult time finding the kitchen at home. But Diana is a good cook who improvises a great deal and excels in Mexican dishes.

To combat the danger of eating himself out of his wardrobe, Landesberg jogs a mile a day and swims laps in his pool while Diana attends the garden.

Landesberg works a four-day week. His schedule generally requires him to be at the studio at 10 a.m. Monday through Wednesday. On Thursday he reports at noon and works until the small hours of Friday morning during taping sessions.

He has converted one of his bedrooms into an office where he spends Fridays and the weekends writing movie scripts.

"I travel to San Francisco a lot when I'm in need of a city fix," says Landesberg. "I'm really a city boy and Los Angeles isn't a city. I fly to New York a half-dozen times a year and would love to keep an apartment there.

"When I'm back east, I go down to Greenwich Village and hang out with the detectives at the local station. Cops love our show everywhere. And it's good for me because I see how they behave and what they talk about. I can use that kind of stuff for playing Dietrich.

Landesberg, who started on Barney Miller playing a con man pretending to be a priest, joined the show as a regular two years ago. He and Ron Carey, another member of the cast, are close friends.

"But my closest friend is Diana," Landesberg concluded. "That girl really knows how to talk about marriage."

Hawaii Five-O returning

Sharon Farrell, William Smith and Moe Keala have been added to the regular cast of Hawaii Five-0, which has just begun filming in Hawaii for its twelfth television season.

Jack Lord continues to star in the series, with a regular supporting cast now consisting of Herman Wedemeyer plus the three newcomers.

Hawaii Five-0, which in the fall will continue to broadcast on Thursdays CBS, is the third-longest-running dramatic series in television history, ranking behind only Gunsmoke and Bonanza.

Miss Farrell is portraying Lori Wilson, an ex-Honolulu policewoman who has joined Hawaii Five-0 chief Steve McGarrett's (Lord) elite state police unit. Smith portrays Kimo Carew, a former mainland cop who also signs on with McGarrett. Hawaiian actor Keala, as Truck, rounds out McGarrett's staff along with Wedemeyer in his longtime role of Duke Lukela.

The Caribou hunt

In the barren area of the Labrador Peninsula, vast herds of Caribou roam from the Torngat Mountains to Ungava Bay. The once-depleted herds are estimated to number around 200,000 today, but tracking them down is not easy for the Naskapi Indians who depend on the Caribou for food, clothing, tools and weapons.

CBC-TV's This Land followed the Caribou hunt by the Naskapi and in a film sub-titled People of the Barrengrounds (to be telecast Monday, June 25 at 10:30 p.m.) shows how traditional hunting skills are being passed on to new generations of these hardy people who have now moved to settlements at Davis Inlet.

Even though the Naskapi of today live in houses they still go out on arduous expeditions, lasting several days, in search of the Caribou, for they are a proud and self-sufficient people and the Caribou supplies all their needs — nothing is wasted.

There is a spiritual bond between these hunters and their prey, and after the kill they celebrate with a feast and traditional songs and dances even though now the setting for such feasts is a high-school arena.

Philip Rich, a Naskapi hunter shown in this program taking his 14-year-old son on a hunting trip, explains "The reason I'm teaching my son is so he is able to follow the tracks of our ancestors".

Mind Your Language, now

A new British comedy series, Mind Your Language, will debut on CBC-TV, Friday, June 29 at 9:30 p.m. Starring Barry Evans (of Doctor In The House), the half-hour sitcom is about an eager young teacher who lands a position teaching English to immigrants.

In spite of the disturbing fate of his predecessors who just couldn't take the strain, Jeremy Brown (Evans) tackles the job with relentless determination. Each day, he faces a classroom of pupils from around the world who all have one thing in common — they speak very little English.

Along with the language barrier, the hapless Brown finds that he is arbitrator to his pupils' religious and racial conflicts. And between times, he is continually being obliged to ward off the advances of passionate male pupils toward a pretty French student, Danielle (played by Francoise Pascal).

The first episode features Brown in his first day on the job, trying to restrain the political outburts of a young Chinese activist while teaching the class the English verb 'to be'. The session is interrupted further, by a heated argument between an Italian and a Greek, who each insist on sitting next to Danielle.

Mind Your Language also stars: Zara Nutley as Miss Courtney, headmistress; George Camiller as Giovanni, who only speaks the 'language of love'; Albert Moss as Ranjeet Singh, a young Sikh who keeps threatening to kill himself, and Iris Sadler as the tea lady.

Produced and directed for the Independent Television Network by Stuart Allen.

Hollywood on Trial: blacklist

At the turn of the '50s, liberal and leftist politics were considered to be on a par with polio, a crippling influence that had to be eradicated at all costs. As the Communist political system began to reach out over the world, America entered an era of hysteria — a mass witch hunt to combat the "Red Scare."

Hollywood on Trial, a dramatic, historical reconstruction of the Blacklist era — a peak period of American's paranoia — airs on Channel 9 Saturday, June 23 at 9 p.m. The documentary uses both rare historical footage and present-day conversations with people who were directly involved in the Cold War hysteria that threw not only the entertainment industry, but the entire nation, into one of the darkest periods of democracy.

It was during these years that one scare bill after another ricocheted through Congress and into law, from the Smith Act (providing for the prosecution of Communist citizens) to the McCarran Act (requiring registration of just about anyone and anything left of centre). The House Committee forged ahead, investigating every area where intellectual activity could subvert a narrowing definition of Americanism.

The committee chose Hollywood as the first target for its national post-war anti-Communist campaign because of its known propensity to harbor intellectuals, romantics and idealists who were flamboyant about their causes. And the indictments were always first-rate headline material for the press.

Appearing on screen as the participants in the investigation are Alvah Bessie, Lester Cole, Edward Dymtryk, Ring Lardner, Jr., Albert Maltz and the late Dalton Trumbo — all members of the "Hollywood Ten," the 1947 group of writers and directors who refused to cooperate with the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Ideal for an expanding family

Here's a practical three-bedroom design which provides all of the modern conveniences and abundant space at present, yet enables the expanding family to increase their usable living area through future development. The boldly dramatic exterior, finished in mixed stucco and vertical channel siding, has a eye-appealing prow front which lends the design a powerful forward thrust and great visual interest.

The weather-recessed double-doored entry, which is immediately below the dining room, leads into a large entrance foyer, which goes upstairs to the living room area. The main landing leads naturally into the large angular living-dining room combination, which features full-height glass area and a convivial masonry fireplace. The dining area separates from the kitchen via space-saving pocket door.

The well-planned, closed U-shape kitchen has an excellent work triangle layout and is separated from the adjacent dinette via convenient snack-bar counter. The kitchen-dinette area may be completely cosed off via pocket doors for disturbance free at-homes.

All three bedrooms are positioned around the central bath and linen storage area. Each has excellent natural lighting and ample closet storage. The large master has a three-piece ensuite with shower. If preferred, the central bath could easily have a second vanity sink installed to ease the morning bathroom traffic.

The lower level has an un-finished recreation room with a roughed-in fireplace for future development, as well as roughed-in plumbing for a downstairs bathroom should personal preference or family expansion require.

An angular wraparound balcony and a double carport complete the convenience features of this outstandingly practical and attractive design.

Plans for design No. 76-1300 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $70.00 for the first set and $10.00 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $100 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $125.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4% sales tax.

Send for current edition of Select Home Designs' Magazine, Series 40, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 320 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.75 ($2.00 plus 75 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, c/o Victoria Times, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C. V5Y 1R2.

John Hearn's collectibles

Lesley Bridges of Victoria sends me a nice wide-open question.

"If you were 18 again (HA!) and just starting a collection, knowing that you know now, what could you collect?"

I don't have to hesitate over that one. First, the criteria — availability, portability, maximum interest, minimum expense and future profitability. The answer is easy, I would collect contemporary autographs.

If I had done that when I was 18 I would now own hand written momemtos of Churchill, Hitler, Mussolini, Einstein, Toscannini, Roosevelt, Trotsky and Carole Lombard plus some thousands of others renowed or reviled today. They would have cost little more than the price of two stamps apiece and a polite request.

Such a collection today would be worth thousands of dollars and would fit into a small suitcase. It would also represent a lifetime of profound involvement with the history makers of the last forty years.

If I had been really dedicated and ingenious the collection would include personal letters, signed books, theatre programs, sheet music, magazine articles and record covers.

The nice thing about collecting contemporary autographs is that you do not have to worry too much about who will eventually be among the greats — you can collect every possible candidate.

If in these days of 17¢ stamps this is a bit of a tall order you can always specialize. Least recommended would be show biz and sports celebrities. They are a little too free with their John Henrys and will never amount to anything. On the other hand you should not choose too narrow a specialty — all Liberal MPs west of the Ontario border, for example, would lack bulk.

A better alternative would be every provincial premier and cabinet minister or every mayor of every Canadian city; given the usual changes of governments and shufflings of offices keeping track of it all would be a lifetime's pursuit. Forty years later you would possess not only a unique collection but a unique knowledge of Candian provincial politics.

Canadian writers is an excellent category, scientists is another, holders of Guinness Records is another and Nobel Prize winners yet another.

The mechanics of collecting contemporary autographs is easy enough — you write and ask for them — being sure to enclose a stamped reply envelope. Autograph buffs favor 3 x 5 plain cards but this suggests to me a lamentable lack of imagination. The really enterprising collector is always angling for a personal note or a signature on a magazine article or anything of the remotest historical interest.

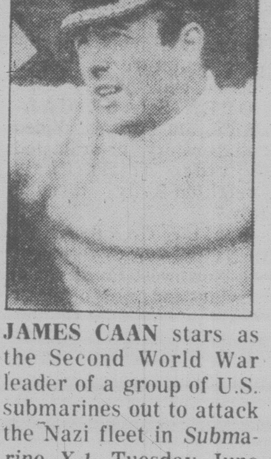
A year or so ago I mentioned a reader who had amassed a lifetime collection of signed covers to Time Magazine. Most coverss of Time feature some worldly celebrity and for many years he had been mailing them off to the subject and receiving them back duly signed. I am not sure what happened to them in the end but I believe they were auctioned off in New York for a tidy sum.

One thing you have to watch out for with celebrities is the mechanical pen. This is an actual pen which writes the actual signature of the owner. Each one is the precise duplicate of the other and virtually valueless on the auction market. Serious collectors hug their own secrets of how they extract those invaluable few hand written words from their target celebrity — Popes and royalty are notoriously uncooperative but it has been done.

As far as future value is concerned, remember this: Before the twentieth century all personal communications were hand written; since then the telephone, the typewriter and the tape recorder have virtually eliminated the need to put pen to paper. Hand written material of any kind is now rare and any that survives into the next century will be even rarer — and by the same token, more valuable.

Readers letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, R.R. #1, Lowbanks, Ontario, N0A 1K0.

SUB ATTACK



JAMES CAAN stars as the Second World War leader of a group of U.S. submarines out to attack the Nazi fleet in Submarine X-1, Tuesday June 26, on Channel 7.

Pat Barclay

The International Year of the Child is bearing some interesting fruit. There's a scheme for a permanent travelling art exhibition, for example, which will tour the country illustrating how Canadians aged 6 to 18 see their surroundings. Any young artist who's interested can submit a picture or pictures to All About Us, Box 1985, Ottawa, Ontario, K1P 5R5 by June 22.

Pictures can be any size and any technique in crayon, paint or mixed media. They should be unmatted and mailed flat, with the artist's name, age and address printed on the back. Pictures selected for the exhibition cannot be returned, though each successful artist will be sent a certificate.

All About Us is looking for art which will portray "the life and activities in the places the artists know best." A previous such project, the Commonwealth Exhibition held in Edmonton last summer, drew entries from close to a thousand Canadian schools and 33 countries. "The more widely we can circulate the work of young artists, the more convinced the public will be of the importance of creative activities," say the people at All About Us. Their ultimate goal is the establishment of a "Cultural Centre for Young Canadians" where "the public can see and appreciate the talents of our young people."

Some of the work this group has already inspired is quite amazingly good. If you're interested, write All About Us at the address above for samples in postcard form. Six assorted designs sell for $1, or 36 for $5.

Next fall, All About Us and Fitzhenry and Whiteside will co-publish a selection from the pictures which have been gathered so far. (Journey on a Painted Boat: Discoveries from the Art of Children) Other publications will include three books of poetry and prose written by children. (E.G.: It Scares Me But I Like It: Creating Poetry with Children, by Russ Hazzard, with an introduction by Dennis Lee. This is a lesson by lesson account of a year's experience writing poetry with children of elementary school age.)

New work is needed for future volumes, so young creative writers please note that All About Us wants to hear from you. There's no payment for writing that is selected, but each successful author will be sent a copy of the publication in which his work appears.

Then there's Another Wordsandwich: Stories and Poem by Kids for Kids, from Books by Kids (paper, $4.25). Another Wordsandwich is a sequel to a 1975 publication titled, naturally, Wordsandwich. Regrettably, the new book is a far cry from the original. The first Wordsandwich was exciting, with real creative sparkle in generous supply. Its contributors were primarily "born writers", whose efforts made up in originality what they sometimes lacked in technique.

But Another Wordsandwich has a derivative air. Its editors, Rick Wilks and Anne Millyard, unwisely left the choice of material up to "review panels of kids". The plain truth is, "kids" make better creative artists than they do critics, for only years of study and experience (combined with intuition) can produce a discerning critic.

Another Wordsandwich is full of short stories which reflect the trendy concerns of juvenile fiction today. One young writer describes a visit to his psychologist, another discusses the family's "black boy" boarder, a third pays tribute to her parents' loving care when it is discovered she has "an awful disease", and a fourth lies in bed at night and wonders if her mother is having an affair.

There's a dramatic poem about rescuing a foal from a burning stable, a prettily descriptive poem about an imaginary world beyond the poet's mantle(sic) and a story about an imaginary world behind a closet door. All of these pieces are competently written but scarcely deserved publication.

Better but still derivative are a group of "Fairly Grim Tales". Though witty and ingenious, these pieces sound as though they were written at the suggestion of an enthusiastic teacher.

All this suggests that the "review panels of kids" chose what they thought they were supposed to like. Their best choices do have that genuine creative spark, but there are too few of them. Next time, I hope Wordsandwich decides to leave the writing to the kids, and the selecting to discerning adults.

LURIE . . . a lack of subtlety

SPARK . . . a lethal way with dialogue

Obsessed egos in collision

By ANTHONY JENKINS

The joy of Muriel Spark's latest novel comes from its delicious artifice. The buoyant pace, the airy transitions between each episode, are sustained with such effortless skill that the comedy may appear to be slighter than it actually is.

Territorial Rights marks a return to the earlier style of novels like The Comforters and The Ballad of Peckham Rye. A central figure of forceful, even devious personality sets off a chain reaction of paranoia in the characters around him who, fearing that their hidden peccadilloes ("territorial rights" in another sense) are about to be exposed, scramble to protect themselves. In so doing, they are completely revealed to the reader.

Robert Leaver, who seems ordinary, if a little insecure, but who turns out to be a nasty piece of work, arrives in Venice to provoke a crisis along its autumnal canals and, by long distance, in "the glorious street of a Birmingham suburb." Robert, like all Spark's catalysts, is a snooper who appears to know more than he actually does about his acquaintances' private lives (in this case, the whereabouts of the body of a Bulgarian politician). His informed guesswork creates a general panic.

The other characters either race for cover, shedding their protective lives as they go, or wander through the intricate web with magnificent obliviousness. Spark knows precisely how much to explain, to imply, or to leave out altogether. And there lies the comedy: Ultimately a matter of style rather than of content.

The enclosed world of Venice at the end of the tourist season is precisely the right backdrop for this tangle of obsessed egos in collision. As with the characters themselves, the city's picturesque veneer barely disguises the underlying intrigue: "The side-canals were ill-lit and the future beyond every few steps was murky. 'Easy,' said Curran, as practically every visitor to Venice says, sooner of later, 'very easy — wouldn't it be? — to slither a knife into some-one, push him into the canal and just walk on.' "

Miss Spark's own knives thrust deep into her characters. She has a lethal way with dialogue that cuts through unwitting pretentiousness. In her hands, cliche becomes a weapon that pins down the most delicate social nuance.

Robert's father, an ex-schoolmaster, dining out with his son's girlfriend, talks to her as he would to a schoolboy, giving her "ten out of ten" for charm, an idiom which, because she is a foreigner, confuses the girl even more than it normally would.

All the characters are wrapped about in self-justification, and their dialogue exposes their narrow prejudices at every turn. Typical is Mrs. Gregory, once a school matron, who congratulates herself in knowing all there is to know about the young: "That's how a lot of these young people talk . . . It's a fashion. They have this claptrap that if you polish your shoes you're a fascist bourgeois. That's why I decided to travel looking lefty. You never know when you need someone young to help you if you're stranded with your suitcase."

In the earlier novels, panic led to madness or to disintegration. Now the characters' ordinary behavior is a sort of madness, and by the book's end the bad and the pathetic receive their rewards with an absurdist lack of poetic justice.

Yet beneath that radiant comedy lurks Spark's delight at the monstrosity in man: "She looked at him before she walked out and said, 'Human nature is evil, isn't it?' His features did not change, nor his smiling lips open, but he made a small cynical snort. Then he said, 'I wouldn't call it evil. Human nature is human nature as far as I'm concerned.' "

Alison Lurie is also a specialist in the comedy of manners, an Updikeian world of marital infidelity among the smarter echelons of New England. The success of her last novel, The War Between The Tates, is not likely to be repeated in this new one, however. For me, the book lacks sufficient subtlety to carry off its lightweight theme.

The plot concerns the changing allegiances between two families and a mutual friend during a fourth of July weekend. The controlling idea is intriguing: as the weekend proceeds the adults grow increasingly childish while their children become disapprovingly adult.

My disappointment stems from Lurie's failure to develop the potentials of that situation. The adults remain stereotypes: Honey, a Southern belle, whose idea of making herself interesting to her husband, a conventionally earnest administrator, is to flirt with other men; Celia, the other wife, an adoring doormat to her flamboyant, macho husband, Dan, who claims to be dissatisfied with his job as an advertising executive.

The sexual ripples between the two pairs are nicely held in check by the manners of the 1930's; in fact, they amount to little more than a storm in a teacup. But the novel's limitations — its lack of "corners" — are typified by the character of the hostess, Anna King, whom we are told is an exceptionally gifted teacher but whose words of wisdom during the various crises verge on the banal, even allowing for the fact that she is herself emotionally involved in the contretemps.

What finally turned me against the novel was that most of it unfurls through the eyes of one of the children, Mary Ann, whose precosity soon becomes preciosity.

No doubt an only child is more prone to a lively inner life, but Mary Ann's vision, despite the occasional ironies it produces, is tiresomely fey.

For me, the most interesting character was Lolly, the second little girl. A withdrawn, silent child, she creates a disturbing, half-perceived space in a novel where everything else is too carefully spelled out. And, as Miss Spark's work triumphantly shows, in a comedy of manners, the telling is everything.

The values of good work

By STEPHEN HUME

Galileo shook up his world by challenging conventional beliefs about the universe, and in this century economist E.F. Schumacher has turned the world on its ear by challenging the way we work and produce things.

Schumacher, who died in 1977, said simply that our production system and our system of values are leading us in the wrong direction. He said this system was wasteful, violent to workers and the environment, and dependent on dwindling, non-renewable fuels.

It was like saying the sun did not revolve around the earth. Technology, Schumacher said, should serve man, not the other way around. He proposed fresh solutions.

His first book, Small is Beautiful, published in 1973, became a modern classic. Subtitled, A Study of Economics As If People Mattered, it's a bible for intellectuals, farmers or city people who believe in the eventual establishment of a "conserver" society.

A conserver society is based on traditional wisdom and respect for nature, two things that were virtually wiped out by the ascendance of science and industry in the last 100 years.

In a new, posthumously published work, compiled mainly from a series of lectures Schumacher gave in the United States in the mid-1970s, he carries on in the same vein, emphasizing the value of good work.

We have his insights into the dilemma of dwindling energy resources, his comments on soul-destroying drudgery in the workplace, and his secular application of Christian and Buddhist ethics.

For example, Schumacher defines the three purposes of human work as follows:

- To provide necessary and useful goods and services.
- To enable every one of us to use and thereby perfect our gifts like good stewards.
- To do so in service to, and in cooperation with, others, so as to liberate ourselves from our inborn egocentricity.

SCHUMACHER . . . some new solutions

He quotes Camus: "Without work, all life goes rotten, but when work is soulless, life stifles and dies."

Printed on recycled paper and filled with the energy of conserver righteousness, the book costs a hefty $18.95. That's for less than 300 pages of concepts on waste, technology and work.

A little too ponderous for a light read, it is nevertheless an invaluable book for classrooms or the upper-level civil service which likely hungers for a detailed explanation and philosophy of the conserver future. That future could be just around the corner.

The name of the game is winning

By WALTER YOUNG

What could be more infuriating for a publisher than to have two elections called before a book such as this one reaches the market. Especially so when the principal author is a former provincial politician who uses his own experiences as a successful campaigner to illustrate his argument. I suppose that the best Macmillan can hope for is that earnest and well-meaning supporters will buy copies for the defeated candidates. They might not welcome such a gift, however.

As with all 'how to' books, this one starts from the premise that, if the novice follows the advice step by step, victory will be well within reach. The subtitle is, "The complete practical guide to organizing and winning any election campaign. This is doubtless meant to attract ambitious politicians at all levels, budding aldermen and school trustees included. It is difficult to see how many of these local politicos would want to conduct as thorough a campaign as Gargrave proposes. Moreover, they might evince some skepticism since the one field in which Gargrave was not a success himself was civic politics in Vancouver.

Warning

There is a warning which the authors do not offer but which should be given to novices who buy this book and set out on the path to political glory. The warning is this: The examples Gargrave gives are from his own experience and should not be used without making some allowances for local conditions. When he suggests that a slogan helps a campaign considerably there would be little point in using his sample, "One Tax Tommy," if the candidate's name is Cedric; nor would there be much to be gained by campaigning in Port Hardy on the slogan, "Save Chinatown."

This is also true with the section about "symbolic acts." Gargrave enrolled in law school and received a law degree and, as he says, "this resulted in some attention from journalists." Indeed it did, but it is not everybody's symbolic dish of tea. When he travelled by air he always purchased accident insurance to finance a by-election. Now that is symbolic of something, of a morbid devotion to the constituency association if nothing else. I wonder if many riding presidents have thought of putting that one up to their sitting member?

One helpful section looks at three kinds of campaign, using money as the guide, much like those travel books such as Silesia on Ten Zlotys a Day. In the $500 Campaign Gargrave suggests that the candidate buy 2,000 posters and then "spend all your time nailing up the posters as they are torn down by your opponents and small children." It would certainly be a relief from door knocking and public speaking, and perhaps if you nailed the things up high enough the children couldn't reach them. One could also pray for a stunted opponent.

Candor

To be fair, Gargrave does have his tongue in his cheek from time to time. It is obvious that the kind of campaign he is most concerned with is the major sort that come in at something in excess of $40,000, which is actually cheap these days. Here he is quite helpful. The chapter which advises the candidate on dealing with the news media is particularly candid and helpful.

It is this candor which the novice will perhaps find a trifle unsettling. Gargrave is not treating his subject as the noble art of putting oneself in the way to doing some public service. It is a struggle to win political office. No punches are pulled and no stunt this side of honesty is too cynical to be used. The object is to win.

From setting up a nominating meeting to instructing canvassers and making silkscreen signs, it is all here. There is even a lengthy bibliography and a sample critical-path chart. What Gargrave does not say, because neither he nor the rest of the politicians knows for sure, is whether all of this really makes any difference in an election. One thing is certain, however — if you do it all and still lose, you will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that you did everything you could have done, short of winning.

HOW TO WIN AN ELECTION, by Anthony Gargrave and Raymond Hull. Macmillan. $7.95.

A problem of basic survival

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

Five hundred miles south of Peking in Shantung Province lies the county of T'an-ch'eng where, late in the year 1671, an adulterous woman named Wang was murdered by her jealous husband.

The couple had been poor — Jen, the husband, earned his living as a hired laborer, and their one-room house contained only a lamp, a cooking pot, a woven sleeping mat and a straw mattress — and the woman's act, followed by flight with her nameless lover, was probably a desperate attempt to escape the miserable circumstances of her life.

But she returned to that life: abandoned by her lover, her feet bound, she really had no choice in the tightly controlled society she lived in. Her husband killed her while she slept one night and then tried to blame the killing on another man with whom he had quarrelled. He was eventually caught and tried, though, and found guilty, albeit with mitigating circumstances — among them that the ". . . woman Wang had not followed the tao of a wife — she had betrayed her husband and had deserved to die." So Jen, presumably, took his blows from the heavy bamboo and probably found another wife. Another domestic tragedy buried in magistrate's reports, time and dirt.

But not so: the whole tale is recounted here for our present interest. And, though The Death of Woman Wang is indeed a personal story of sex and death, those aspects of life in 17th-century China must be seen as the focal points around which Jonathan Spence examines the entire realm of poverty and disaster that seemed to infuse the lives of T'an-ch'eng's inhabitants.

Repeatedly the county was hit by natural disasters through the century: floods, locusts, heavy snows and earthquakes. The disasters always ended, of course, and the people who hadn't fled or been killed managed somehow to re-establish themselves and carry on with their simple farming and trading.

Spence, however, is more concerned with what can only be called another disaster, more crippling and longer lasting than anything nature might bring down: the social system that clamped the Chinese common people in a vise from which, as the fate of the woman Wang makes clear, death was the only escape.

That society was at the same time incredibly complex yet simple: for every rule, duty or obligation there was a corresponding punishment for infraction, a punishment that could, on the other hand, be adjusted almost infinitely depending on the character of the local magistrate and the particular circumstances of the case.

And alongside this multi-layered legal and social edifice there existed another one, that of the powerful landlords and bandits who regularly plundered the people with or without the help of the law.

THE DEATH OF WOMAN WANG, by Jonathan D. Spence. Penguin. $2.95.

Caught like that, Spence points out, ". . the people's problem was one of basic survival — physical and moral — in a world that seemed to be disintegrating before their eyes."

The people who found it hardest to survive were, of course, the women.

"The virtues fostered," Spence writes, "were those of chastity, courage, tenacity and unquestioning acceptance of the prevailing hierarchy — unto death if necessary."

So this little book is full of the deaths of women, by murder and suicide in particular. A great sense of claustrophobia begins to rise from these pages: there is nowhere, ultimately, for these women to turn to but the grave. Or not even there, perhaps: a little loose soil over the shrivelled, frozen flesh of woman Wang.

Seldom has a particular society — and especially Chinse society, where glut of description and analysis is the rule — been so well rendered as in The Death of Woman Wang.

One of the most interesting devices Spence uses here is frequent quotation, including whole tales, from a book of "Strange Stories" written by P'u Sung-ling. These simple, ironic observations by a resident of T'an-ch'eng conjure depths of emotional truth that no statistical or factual account could come near to suggesting. When combined with the comments of the magistrate Huang Liu-Hung, who seems to have been a fair-minded compassionate man doing his best in an impossible situation, we are offered a reality that any sensitive reader will respond to.

By and large, books containing collections of previously published work have no place in this column, which is essentially concerned with current writing, but rules, even self-imposed ones, are made to be broken and I'm delighted to make an exception for Poison Penmanship, by the one and only Jessica Mitford.

La Mitford is a dotty-looking woman, careless of her appearance, whose motherliness, winsome manner, geniality, and general air of genteel inoffensiveness encourages the unwary to drop their guard when talking to her. And, I need hardly remind you, many normally astute people, suitably disarmed, have lived to regret it.

Only when it's too late, after the meat of their nice little chat has appeared in print, do they discover that appearances can be deceptive and that they have unwittingly walked into the trap, baited with charm, that is set regularly to ensnare the unjust. They have in fact tangled with the Queen of the Muckrakers, a lady of steel with an instinct for the jugular.

Muckraking used to be a term of opprobrium, but largely due to Jessica Mitford's efforts, and the work of the uncoverers of Watergate and The Sunday Times Insight teams, it has acquired respectability and is now defined in most dictionaries as the search for and exposure of political or commercial corruption. For this reason muckrakers are my favorite people and I rejoice in their triumphs and greet the discomfiture of their victims with fiendish glee.

Jessica Mitford has written three muckraking books, the most famous of which is The American Way of Death, an account of the successful one-woman war she waged against the funeral industry. But books are only part of her stock-in-trade. In her unceasing assault on chicanery and institutionalized idiocy she has drawn lots of blood with magazine articles.

Seventeen of her articles — the cream of her murderous crop — are reprinted in Poison Penmanship. They are great to read or re-read, but the special joy of this book is the practical (and often hilarious) running commentary in which she reveals the essence of the gentle art of muckraking and generously explains her strategies and tactics.

We learn in detail how, with the utmost sweetness, she extracts vital information from unfriendly witnesses, how she easily avoids libel without ever sheathing her rapier, and how she allows the subjects of her investigations to set themselves up as targets for her elegant and deadly slingshot.

Reprinted here, with appropriate commentaries, are the articles she wrote preceding and following publication of her exposure of the shocking malpractices in the funeral industry; a devastating account of the artificial lives of the country-club set in the Deep South as counterpoint to the racial hatred of the Sixties; and a lot more, including the ridiculing by straight reporting of NBC television's killing of a program about venereal disease because they refused to allow the word syphilis to be used in a segment dealing specifically with syphilis.

MITFORD . . . disarming style

For me, the best reading in the book is her lovingly lethal attack on the Famous Writers School. Back in the Sixties, newspapers and magazines were plastered with advertisements claiming that anyone could become a successful writer and make a fat living by enrolling in a correspondence course personally supervised by the school's "Guiding Faculty" of famous writers.

The so-called guiding faculty consisted of 15 famous writers, including Bennett Cerf, Faith Baldwin, Clifton Fadiman, Phyllis McGinley, Rod Serling and Red Smith. It was obvious that the school was trading on the proverbial gullibility of would-be writers, but why would such well known, eminently successful people associate themselves with such a swindle? Intrigued, Jessica Mitford decided to find out. She discovered that the "guiding faculty" were paid large sums for the use of their names and that they had nothing at all to do with the operation.

She discovered a lot more, all of it nasty, and then she gathered together her notes, dipped her pen in venom, and let them have it. The article created a sensation and it, together with a few radio and television appearances, resulted in the bankruptcy and disappearance of what had been an international, multi-million dollar operation. In her commentary following the reprint of this article Ms. Mitford admits that it gave her more satisfaction than anything else she had written.

In an Afterword to Poison Penmanship Washington Post reporter Carl Bernstein, of Watergate fame, writes that Ms. Mitford's extended introduction and the wonderful pieces themselves constitute "as good a primer on reporting as I've read." How right he is. The articles, introduction and commentaries form not only a comprehensive guide to investigative reporting but also a complete education in the incomparable Mitford muckraking school.

Far too many newspapermen today spend their first year compiling a list of useful contacts and learning to present the news in a formula acceptable to an undemanding editor. "Experience" consists of doing the same thing over a given number of years. Editors and reporters who settle for a nice quiet, safe existence as recorders of events should be drummed out of the business. That's not the way journalism earned its honorable title of Fourth Estate.

The Woodwards and the Bernsteins, and especially a free-lance like the peerless Jessica Mitford, know only too well that a high standard of reporting can only be attained and maintained by a consistent capacity for dedicated drudgery. Good writing depends on good homework. Mitford, for example, spends weeks, and sometimes months, on research and she never conducts a single interview until she knows more about the subject than the person she is talking to, and she does all this alone without the benefit of a journalistic empire backing her up with clout, clips, cables and credit cards.

She has been supremely successful because apart from an unfailing ear, an instinct for the jugular, and the willingness to tackle anything and anybody, she early realized that all journalism is subjective, and that fairness, not some unattainable idea of so-called objectivity, is the reporter's true obligation.

What distinguishes Mitford from the herd is that instead of shying away from the malevolent people who plague our lives, as most of us do, she wades in and deals with them, thus living out all our fantasies.

No injustice or idiocy escapes her, as you'll find out when you read this book. The prison system in the United States is still reeling from the effects of the revelations in her book, Kind and Usual Punishment. A New York restaurant, misnamed Sign of the Dove, ceased to be a thieving tourist trap after she'd got through with it in print. And a well known California university, which made the foolish mistake of trying to fingerprint her during her term as Distinguished Professor, still hasn't recovered from the ridicule she heaped on it in a story that made her an instant cause celebre.

Books of reprints often presage the closure of a career. I fervently pray that this doesn't apply in this instance. There's so much more for Mitford to tackle before she lays down her venomous pen, everything from the evil hearing-aid racket to the lucrative Jesus industry.

But when she does decide to call it a day perhaps a worthy successor will take up the cudgels, using this book as a guide. But to achieve what Mitford has he or she will be required to possess, in addition to the obvious talents, grace, wit, cunning, style, imagination, and — above all — in Bernstein's words, "a sense of enjoying the journey."

The most disadvantaged minority of all: Indian women

One of the biggest scandals in Canada is the willingness on the part of men, Indian and white, to accept the legal victimization of Indian women.

To be born poor, Indian and female is to be a member of the most disadvantaged minority in Canada today.

The powers that be, the white politicians, Indian leaders and male-dominated executive of the National Indian Brotherhood, are unwilling to change this state of affairs.

For 110 years, Indian women in Canada have been victimized and discriminated against by the federal Indian Act, which provides that an Indian woman who marries a non-Indian man ceases to be an Indian within the meaning of any law or statute in Canada.

Yet the 1869 Act was not a reflection of Indian society, which in some cases, as with the Iroquois, was strongly matriarchal.

Rather, the act was a reflection of European assumptions about private property and inheritance through the male; it was, indeed, a reflection of 19th century white colonial attitudes on men, women and marriage.

Nor did the legislation represent the wishes of Indians, who were never consulted on the act until just recently. The real purpose of the Indian Act in 1869 was to reduce the number of Indians and halfbreeds on reserves as part of the government's stated policy of doing away with reserves and assimilating all native people into the Euro-Canadian culture

Under the act, in 1869 as in 1979, an Indian woman who marries a non-Indian is without legal recourse of any kind.

Obviously, the psychological effects of this would be devastating. According to the act, she must leave her parents' home and reserve when she marries. She may not own property on the reserve and may be prevented from inheriting it. She may be prevented from returning to live with her family on the reserve, even if she is very ill, a widow, divorced or separated. She may not be buried on the reserve with her forebears.

No such restrictions are provided in the Indian Act for Indian men. Nor do other Canadian married women face penalties in the event of inter-racial marriage.

Both government and Indian leaders admit this section of the Indian Act discriminates against Indian women. Their reluctance to change it suggests that cowardice, when it comes to womens' rights, is a common ground for Indian and white brothers.

It also appears that the bonding between white men and Indian men is strengthened by a common mysogynism, and an unwillingness to accept women as equals.

Indian Women and the Law in Canada: Citizens Minus, is a short but fascinating account of the political realities behind this anti-female section of the Indian Act.

Researched by Kathleen Jamieson and the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women, the book cuts into the historical heart of the matter: how 19th century Indian legislation evolved; government attitudes toward marriage between white men and Indian women, and Indian tradition and reaction to government policy.

The 92-page paperback is simple, straightforward and compelling. The book can be obtained free of charge by writing the Advisory Council on the Status of Women, Box 1541, Station B, Ottawa, K1P 5R5. — S.H.

New Angel for Charlie's roost

When Charlie's Angels returns for its fourth season this September, Angel No. 5, Shelley Hack, will be trying her wings. Shelley will be replacing Kate Jackson, who, like Farrah Fawcett, has left the glamorous ABC showcase for bigger and better things.

Shelley, a 5-foot-7½ blonde from Greenwich, Conn., was chosen following a U.S.wide search in which more than 150 actresses were auditioned. She will play a new character named Tiffany Welles, the daughter of a Connecticut police chief who is an old friend of the angels' employer, the unseen Charlie.

The opening episode, "Angels in the Sun," is being shot entirely in the Caribbean. In the hot tropical sun, the lovely Tiffany will go undercover with plainclothes angels Kelly Garrett and Kris Munroe (Jaclyn Smith and Cheryl Ladd) in deeds of crime-busting derring-do.

Shelley's big blue eyes and strawberry blonde hair can be spotted on television commercials and in top fashion magazines. As The Charlie Girl, the 27-year-old lovely decorates the pages of Vogue, Harper's Bazaar and Glamour magazines to promote Revlon cosmetics — especially the distinctive perfume named for the late make-up tycoon, Revlon founder Charles Revson.

In making the switch from Charlie Girl to Charlie's Angel, Shelley changes from model to full-time actress. Her previous credits include a starring role in "If Ever I See You Again" and a brief appearance in Woody Allen's Annie Hall.

Having studied at the Herbert Berghof Studios with Jack Wolzer, Shelley has only recently begun to pursue an acting career.

Archie flying solo when series returns

By JAY BOBBIN

Although few television programs have successfully dealt with controversy, there's one notable exception. It can be accurately summed up in just two words: Archie and Edith.

All in the Family has made the Bunkers into familiar and favorite characters who rank with the all-time greats in television history. As it heads for its ninth season (under the new title of Archie Bunker's Place), the series continues to break ground by exploring social issues through the experiences Archie and Edith go through in their daily life.

The Bunkers are now on their own, since daughter Gloria and her husband Mike have moved to California with their infant son, Joey. However, they've taken in Stephanie, the daughter of Edith's itinerant cousin. That situation has caused a few headaches and heartaches for all concerned.

In 1971, four actors named Carroll O'Connor, Jean Stapleton, Sally Struthers and Rob Reiner had admirable acting credits, but they were hardly household names. That was to change by 1972.

The first reaction to the show was one of momentary shock. Bigotry and controversy had never been presented so blatantly on commercial television before and, as Norman Lear himself knew, All in the Family would either be an enormous hit or a catastrophic flop. Luckily, it followed the former route and has racked up nothing but high ratings and major accolades ever since.

Good ole' Archie Bunker

Even though the lead characters are a bit exaggerated, their situations rarely are. Archie has been plagued by unemployment, Ku Klux Klan harassment and possible pill poisoning among many, many other things.

All in the Family has been the source of several other spin-off series such as Maude and The Jeffersons, who began their television careers with the Bunkers. Its innovative style also established Norman Lear as a king of the TV industry, a title which he still maintains through other series such as One Day at a Time and Diff'rent Strokes.

Jean Stapleton (Edith) won't be returning to the series except for periodic appearances during the next season, so the creative body behind the show is already hard at work, conjuring up new directions in which Carroll O'Connor can take the character of Archie Bunker.

Meanwhile, O'Connor himself is keeping busy on the production side of the business by turning out the pilot for a projected series starring Harry Guardino.

Pele's soccer tips

Pele, the greatest player in the history of soccer, will demonstrate soccer techniques on the June 24th game and on all of the other North American Soccer League games which are being televised by ABC Sports.

Pele shows where the ball should make contact with the head — only the centre of the forehead, not the top nor the side of the head. The point is to hit the ball with your forehead before it hits you. Generally, a player must jump to be in the proper position to head the ball.

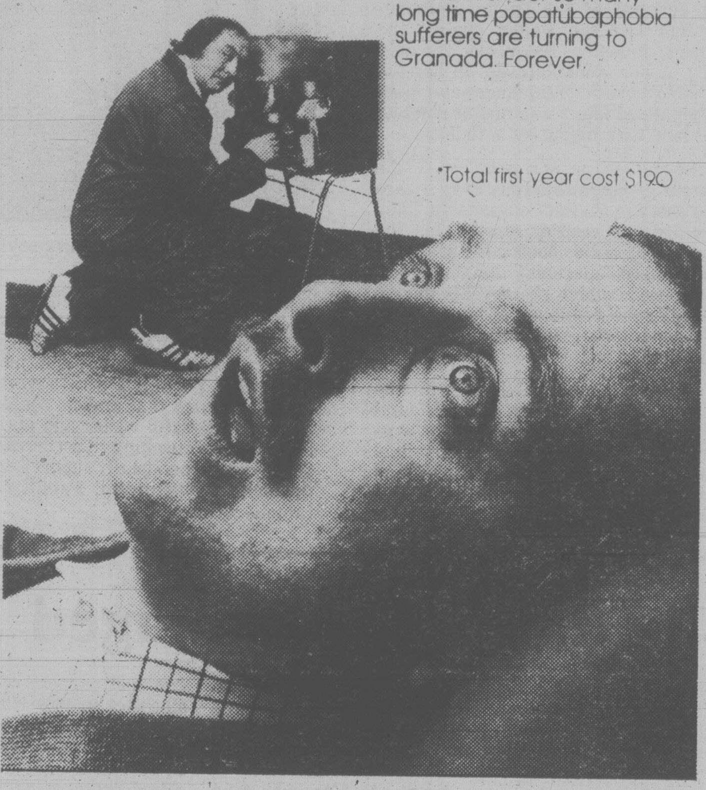
The morbid fear of colour TV breakdown.
It can strike at any time, at anyone who owns their own colour TV.
But Granada has the cure.
Because, Granada rents colour TV'S from as little as only $15 a month*, that includes all service and all parts.
And even a colour loaner should your TV ever need shop service.
No wonder so many long time popatubaphobia sufferers are turning to Granada. Forever.



*Total first year cost $190

All Granada locations are open daily from 9 AM to 9 PM, and Saturday till 6.
